Charleston Cut Off as Storm Lashes 2 Atlantic Coast States

6 Reported Lost As 12-Foot Tide Sweeps Beach

Worst Hurricane Of Century Hits South Carolina, Georgia Shores

By the Associated Press

Georgetown, S. C., Aug. 11.—A 75-miles-an-hour hurricane out of the tropics, the severest to hit these shores since the turn of the century, appeared tonight to have veered inland after having loosed its fury from Savannah, Ga., to Georgetown, 60 miles up the coast from Charleston.

Of all the cities in the storm's path Charleston appeared to be the worst hit. Cut off from communication, and without electric power, the historic city of some 75,000 population was in darkness tonight, many of its streets flooded by high tides.

The only known casualty in the storm area was a colored woman, who was struck by flying glass in a Savannah, Ga., street, and killed. There was an unconfirmed report from Charleston that two persons were electrocuted by a fallen high tension wire.

An amateur short-wave broadcast from Charleston, picked up in Raleigh, N. C., said six persons were believed to have drowned when caught in a high tide at Folley Beach, near Charleston.

Marine Base Cut Off

Beaufort and other resort towns, and the Parris Island Marine Base, all in the area between Charleston and Savannah, also were cut off. This section, Weather Bureau reports indicated, was in the center of the storm.

Communication lines with Charleston failed at noon and late tonight had not been restored. An Associated Press reporter telephoned an account of the Charleston storm over a shaky wire from St. George, S. C., 40 miles inland from Charleston.

Downtown streets of Charleston were flooded, waist deep in some places, and parts of the city were strewn with debris and tin roofs.

The Charleston Weather Bureau reported the storm reached its full intensity about 2:30 p. m. (E. S. T.)

"Worst Appears Over"

The wind reached a velocity of 76 miles per hour then. The wind began diminishing and the barometer began rising about 4 p. m.

There was no means of communication with the outlying Charleston beach resorts, but it was believed that they had been completely evacuated before the storm hit.

[Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former Army Chief of Staff and Red Cross representative at Charleston, reported more than 400 persons were driven from their homes. The American Red Cross in Washington received a message from Summerall at 8:37 p. m. over the Navy Department's radio communications.]

Hurricane warnings were displayed south from Wilmington, N. C., to Savannah.

5-Cent-Milk Depots Open In D. C. Today

Welfare Board To Certify Needy Wishing Beverage

Distribution of 5-cent milk to needy families starts here at 1 p. m. today at 11 depots conveniently located in various areas of the city.

The Board of Public Welfare will certify recipients of the milk. The welfare director, Robert E. Bondy, has sent letters to about 10,000 persons telling them about the plan and asking them to advise by return mail the milk depot they would patronize.

Persons eligible have been placed in three groups: those getting public assistance from the District or some private agency; those certified for WPA work but awaiting the job assignment, and those certified by WPA but who have been found for some reason unassignable.

The depots will sell only quart bottles of milk. Under the system, no one person may buy a full quart of milk a day. A pint a day will be allotted to each person under 17 in an eligible family. Any single person is entitled to a pint a day.

This rule, however, will not be too rigid, it was announced. Where dietary demands must be considered, the board may allocate a larger quantity of milk.

The stations will be opened every day except Sundays and holidays, from 1 to 5 p. m. Three workers will be assigned to each depot by the WPA. All recipients of the milk will carry milk certification cards, issued by the Public Assistance Division, Board of Public Welfare.

The locations of the 11 depots opening today are as follows:

Evacuation Of Flooded City Ordered

Epidemic Threatens 13,000 After Fouling Of Water System In Crowley, La.

By the Associated Press

Lafayette, La., Aug. 11.—Immediate evacuation of the 13,000 residents and refugees of the flood-stricken city of Crowley was ordered tonight by State authorities after health officers reported its water system was fouled, with the threat of epidemic increasing hourly.

Medical supplies and scores of physicians and nurses were sent into the vast inundated flatlands southwest of here after reports of typhoid and diphtheria cases came from the flooded zone. The disaster was caused by torrential rains following last weeks' tropical storm.

Steve Alford, superintendent of State police, went to Crowley, capital of the southwestern Louisiana rice belt, with 40 State troopers to enforce the evacuation order after many residents in the city 20 miles from here refused to leave.

Guard Against Looting

State police were instructed particularly to watch for looting, after Gov. Jones, who made a tour of the stricken area today, receeived an appeal from John G. Neelis, bank president at nearby Gueydan, to send National Guardsman.

G. T. Owen, executive counsel to the Governor, said at Baton Rouge that Coast Guard planes had delivered vaccine to Gueydan and that food and drinking water had been started to the beleaguered town by boat.

Gov. Jones said here after an inspection of the flood area, where an estimated 30,000 persons have been marooned or forced to evacuate, that the American Red Cross and State agencies are bending every effort to save lives and prevent the threat of epidemics.

The State Board of Health has dispatched 70,000 cubic centimeters of typhoid serum to stations at Jennings, New Iberia, Abbeville, Lafayette, Lake Charles and Opelousas.

Whites Refuse to Leave

The task of exhausted relief workers in Crowley, a city of 10,000 whose population has been swollen to 13,000 by refugees, was rendered vastly more difficult overnight. Most of the white residents there, despite their plight and virtual exhaustion of food supplies, refused to leave in trains of box cars sent to evacuate them.

Approximately 500 women and small children were brought out about midnight and housed in the community building here. Rush calls went out this morning to round up sufficient milk for the youngsters.

Troops Asked to Help

Few white persons were aboard a relief train arriving here at 7:30 a. m., carrying more than 1,500 bedraggled colored persons forcibly taken from a badly overcrowded zone into which they flocked.

Meanwhile relief authorities here sent an emergency call to Camp Beauregard, where about 50,000 Regular Army troops and National Guardsmen are in training, asking for any beds, blankets, medicines and food supplies.

Senate Faces Week's Battle On Draft Bill

Membership Evenly Divided on Issue, Unofficial Poll Shows

While advocates and foes of conscription prepared last night for a full week of additional oratorical battling over the issue, the Defense Advisory Commission took steps to assure preferential delivery of defense materials by industry.

Both sides in the Senate fight over the Burke-Wadsworth bill calling for conscription of men from 21 to 31 years of age were seeking converts, amid indications that to date there is a close division.

One private poll was reported by International News Service to show 38 Senators for the bill, 38 against it and 20 undecided or unwilling yet to commit themselves.

The Defense Commission, meanwhile, reminding industry that the President is authorized to decree priority for Army and Navy contracts over all deliveries for private account or for export, said that it would rely for the present on co-

D. C. Salesman, Baltimore Girl Are Drowned

George Walter Neely, 38-year-old Washington salesman, was drowned yesterday after he apparently fell from a boat in a crabbing expedition on the Severn River as a Baltimore girl lost her life at Scroth's Beach.

The body of the District victim, who lived at 1625 Monroe street northwest, was recovered 75 feet off shore by Charles Alghren, of Herald Harbor.

Miss Elizabeth Singleton, 18, of Baltimore, was drowned at Scroth's Beach, on Marley Creek. Calvin Bain, chief of the Riviera Beach Fire Department, fell from a boat while attempting to lift her body from the water. Unable to swim, he went down twice before he was rescued.

Hoover Calls On U.S. to Feed Invaded Lands

Suggests Guarantees From Nazis, Britain To Ward Off Famine

Copyright by New York Times

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 11.—Herbert Hoover, arriving here this afternoon for a conference with Wendell L. Willkie, issued a statement in which he declared that the civilian population of Norway, Holland, Belgium and Poland faced "wholesale starvation, death and disease" this winter unless food could be shipped into those countries from America and other non-belligerent nations.

The former President, declaring that "someone must intervene if these people are to be saved," urged the formation of a neutral non-Governmental organization to handle the food problems in those countries.

He listed three points which must first be determined before such aid could be sent from this Nation.

The first point was that Germany agree to take none of the domestic produce of the four nations, fur-

Son of Former D. C. Curate Dies In Plane Crash

An airplane crash at Conway, Pa., yesterday resulted in the death of Robert E. Browning, jr., 27-year-old engineer and son of a former curate of Epiphany Episcopal Church here.

Browning and his wife, the former Miss Ruth Gurney, of Cheverly, Md., were expecting their first child after nine years of marriage. They had been living at Rochester, Pa., since May 20 while he installed equipment at the St. Joseph's Lead Co., plant near Monaca, Pa.

The light cabin plane in which he was a passenger crashed and burst into flames within a few minutes after it took off from the Conway Airport. The pilot, Clarence Hartling, 22, of Freedom, Pa., also died.

Thoroughbred Gives Horse Laugh To B. & O. Flyer

Baltimore, Aug. 11 (AP).—A runaway race horse stopped the Royal Blue, streamlined Washington to New York flyer of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, near here today.

Mudsil, 1½-year-old filly, became frightened and jumped out of a trailer-van. Police chased Mudsil for eight miles, some of it on the railway.

Signal Towerman Francis De Vouges threw on a red light to halt the train, and Mudsil's pursuers chased her in a nearby field until she was winded.

200-Pounder Shot, Policeman Beaten In Street Fight

Private L. R. Henson, Thirteenth Precinct, was beaten severely and a man shot in the abdomen early today in a fight over throwing rubbish into the street.

The shooting took place at Seventh and T streets northwest after the man, according to Henson, replied to the officer's threat to arrest him with the remark:

"Are you man enough to do it?"

The man was identified as Richard Reeves, 24, colored, 1022 Park road northwest. Reeves weighs over 200 pounds.

Willkie Gives Warning on Election Ads

Says Hatch Act Bans Democratic Book; Confers With Hoover, Elliott Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 11.—Wendell Willkie conferred tonight with former President Herbert Hoover after Willkie had issued a warning to "all corporations and their officials" that if he is elected President all purchasers of advertising in the Democratic campaign book "will be relentlessly prosecuted."

No information was forthcoming on what Willkie and Hoover said to each other, but the former President told newsmen later he believed opposition to a third term for President Roosevelt was "only one of twenty issues" in the current campaign.

"The outstanding issue is that of the whole social system of the American people.

"Another Blum"

"There is a growing feeling all over the country that we are in the presence of another Blum administration."

[Leon Blum was head of the Popular Front government in France which collapsed.—Editor's note.]

"Such an administration," he went on, leads to the degeneration of democracy and the devitalization of the people. Another four years would see this Government transformed beyond recall.

"No one specific thing would lead to disaster, but if you have a combination of 30 or 40 factors, then you're threatening the American form of government."

Silent on the Draft

Asked for his views on military conscription, Hoover responded:

"I don't propose to discuss every issue that comes along—at least at the present time."

To a query whether he would make any addresses in Willkie's behalf, Hoover said he had none scheduled at present, but that he would make a nonpolitical talk at the University of Pennsylvania September 18.

With Hoover seated beside him, Willkie had an interview with Elliott Roosevelt, a son of the President.

Hoover Whispers Caution

The Republican nominee, chatting with reporters in his resort hotel suite here, was advised that the younger Roosevelt was in the hotel. Willkie picked up the telephone.

"Hello," said Willkie, "this is Wendell Willkie, could you come up for a little talk? Thanks."

Hoover whispered, "Wouldn't go too strong on that!"

Elliott Roosevelt later told reporters that he and Willkie had talked about the recent meeting in San Francisco of the National Association of Broadcasters, at which the Republican National Committee requested radio time equivalent to that given President Roosevelt in his fireside chats.

Young Roosevelt advised Willkie that in view of the Hatch law restricting campaign expenditures the radio should follow newspapers

'Crippling Damage'

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 11.—Crippling damage to Britain's air force and to the fortified British naval base at Portland by massive waves of Nazi air raiders was reported officially tonight.

The high command admitted 17 German planes had not returned home.

On the basis of still tentative information, it summarized the day's bag as 89 British planes downed, 4 convoyed merchantmen sunk and a destroyer and three merchantmen damaged. Eight barrage balloons also were said to have been burst by aerial gunfire at Dover.

17 Others Claimed

Besides 57 British planes felled at Portland, the high command said, German airmen shot down 17 others in their attack on the convoy, 7 at Dover, and the remaining 8 "at other points."

Still awaiting complete information on the day-long series of battles, German sources said Nazi successes were mountin" "from minute to minute."

(However, the German wireless in a broadcast picked up in New York by CBS warned that today's air operations "are not to be interpreted as the start of a German attack on Great Britain." The announcer indicated the raids were part of thorough preparations for the "final bout with the British.")

Worst at Portland

Severest and apparently longest of the air fights was over the precipitous shoreline at Portland.

Quoting eyewitnesses, DNB, official German news agency, described Portland as heavily shattered by the Nazi bombers. They were said to have destroyed almost every ship in the harbor.

Walls of wharves were said to have caved in, some warehouses to have collapsed and others to have burned under the German bombardment.

Reconnaissance fliers who scouted the scene, the agency said, reported oil stores and harbor works in flames, huge bomb craters scooped out by explosives, loading piers

Raiders Return

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), Aug. 12.—Successive waves of German warplanes attempted to break through defense lines on the northeast coast early today several hours after more than 400 swastika-marked planes lashed 300 miles of England's coasts in a gigantic air fight.

The British reported the fresh German attack was repulsed by heavy fire from ground batteries.

After the firing in the great air battle had died down along England's gun-girdled coasts last night, the British air ministry claimed an official total of 60 German warplanes shot down. However, the air ministry's news service in a story of the day-long fighting detailed 70 German planes shot down.

Admit Losing 26 Planes

The British said they lost 26 planes.

As the raids continued today, a loud explosion was heard over a large area of northern Ireland. The cause was not known but aircraft were known to have been in the vicinity.

Other early morning raiders over England reconnoitered widely and dropped a large number of bombs on an unidentified west coast town.

Enemy planes were reported over southwest and southeast England, the Midlands and Wales. In one battle off the coast early today, British Spitfires forced a German dive-bomber—a Junker 87—into the sea.

The swarming Germans yesterday battered hardest against the British naval base of Portland, with 200 German planes in that fight.

The air ministry announced the fight was the second in four days over the English Channel battle-front in which 400 planes have been hurled against Britain's defenses.

Smash at Shipping

The other 400-plane raid was aimed at southeastern England last Thursday, when 60 Nazi planes were reported downed.

Portland, island naval base just off the south coast from Weymouth, bore the brunt of the attack. But other large flights of raiders smashed at shipping along miles of the Channel, and pierced inland, bombing towns with an undisclosed toll.

'Requests . . . Cannot Be Met'

New School Budget Raises 'False Hopes,' Overton Warns

The $18,300,000 school budget submitted to the District Commissioners Saturday by the Board of Education represents "false hopes" for expenditures that cannot be made without increased revenue, Senator John H. Overton, chairman of the District Appropriations Subcommittee, warned yesterday.

The Louisiana Democrat said the city's tax rate would have to be raised considerably or the Federal contribution increased, or both, to provide the $5,500,000 increase over last year's school money.

"There is no use," he said, "in piling up these tremendous requests, which cannot be met, and creating false hopes.

"I don't think that the school authorities alone should be warned of this problem, but every District department head. I favor a sales tax for the District as an equitable manner of obtaining additional revenue."

Overton said he would "like to do something about the Abbott Vocational School and to do something about replacing some of the elementary schools."

The budget, first received by the commissioners since the Federal Budget Bureau relinquished its complete dominance over local expenditures, is more than 43 per cent larger than the amount appropriated for the current school session.

It represents "accumulated needs" rather than plans for possible future needs of the schools.

Eyewitness Story of Raid

New British Weapon Fires Net Of Steel to Snare Nazi Planes

By Dan Campbell
United Press Staff Writer

A Southeast English Coast Town, Aug. 11.—I sat on the Dover cliffs at "Hell's Corner" today and saw a new and terrifying British weapon—a spiderweb net of steel cables [illegible] guns—snare Nazi planes [illegible] upon this coastal town in five day-long waves.

From dawn to dusk the waves of Nazi dive-bombers and Messerschmitt fighters attempted to blast a path through Britain's protective balloon barrage guarding harbor shipping and the steel cables fired from what the natives here have dubbed "the rattling guns."

It seemed that the German fliers would never give up as antiaircraft guns threw hundreds of shells at them and British fighters gave them bitter battle in the powder-blue sky.

Ten of the German raiders were shot down nearby, I was told.

Two of the barrage balloons with their dangling steel cables were shot down, one bursting into flames like a paper Fourth of July balloon.

But tonight the huge balloon field flew in the moonlight, after the last Nazi fliers had hiked for home to Calais and Boulogne which I was able to see clearly across the narrow English Channel.

As the German planes swept in

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

10 HINTS BY A RETIRED MAJOR

A curious document has been passed around at the War Department which in ordinary times would have aroused nothing but smiles but which does not arouse many smiles today. It contains ten suggestions from a retired Army officer for the new War Department Building.

Harlan Miller

Some of them are fairly far-fetched. But they are also illuminating because they show how some retired officers and some active ones are thinking nowadays. Its author, Maj. E. L. Dyer, the famous fencer, explains his suggestions were inspired because "several capital cities have recently been subjected to attack, bombing, rioting and fifth column activities."

* * * *

1. Beside its normal use as an office building, will it be suitable for a citadel, defensible against mobs, airplanes and surprise attacks? Should wire entanglements and steel shutters for windows be anticipated?

* * * *

2. Will it be bomb-proof? Will it be strong enough structurally to support the additional weight for bomb-proofing?

3. Can it be made gas proof with special windows and ventilators?

"—on their way to work"

4. Should provisions be made at the new War Department Building for machine gun, searchlight, light artillery and antiaircraft emplacements?

5. Could it quarter an infantry battalion with small hospital, magazine, storage space and shelter for vehicles?

* * * *

6. Will it have several underground floors, sufficient to garage all cars of personnel plus those of visitors? In an emergency could this place be utilized for tanks and airplanes?

* * * *

(Note. It may be considered unfair to a community harassed by parking problems to construct new buildings incapable of providing garage space for cars of personnel.)

* * * *

7. Can subway connections, linking with other important Government buildings, be anticipated?

* * * *

8. Will its layout of roads and driveways give a smooth, streamlined traffic flow?

Will it have direct, protected access to a wharf, to a railway, to a bridge into Virginia?

"—on the general's roof?"

9. Will it be provided with an independent power plant, water supply, radio station, fire and flood prevention protection?

10. Could its roof be utilized for airplane landing and taking off? (Note: Perhaps a few bicycle racks could be installed near the door.)

* * * *

The answer to Maj. Dyer's questions, of course, are virtually all "No," with perhaps a few maybes. Even if such innovations were feasible the cost would be prohibitive, and the building would scarcely be finished in time for the war of 1950.

* * * *

And as others point out, the supreme virtue of any headquarters like the War Department is its mobility; it can be moved in briefcases, and any general can in an emergency make his office in a big armored tank.

* * * *

Another consoling thought is that the defense of the Capital could be entrusted to a group of isolationist Senators like Nye and Holt, or to a group of anti-British, pro-Nazi Congressmen from districts where Herr Goebbels casts quite a few votes, or perhaps to patriots like Col. Lindbergh who are convinced of Herr Hitler's virtuous, benevolent intentions.

Bendix Officials, C.I.O. Agree to End Controversy

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 11 (AP).—Terms for settling a controversy which had brought production to a virtual standstill in the Bendix Aviation Corporation, which makes parts essential to commercial and military airplane motors, were approved tonight by the management and officials of the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers of America.

The union will vote tomorrow night on the agreement, reached at the end of two days of conferences. Details were not disclosed.

James F. Dewey, Federal labor conciliator, brought together the union and Bendix officials after asserting that the "slow down" was affecting seriously the national defense program.

He said the plant would resume normal production tomorrow.

D. C. Soldiers Face Hot Week in Field

Troops Refreshed After Day of Rest And Church Rites

By Marshall Andrews
A Staff Correspondent

Rensselaer Falls, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Fresh after a day of rest and worship, men of the First Army rolled into their blankets tonight to face in the morning a week of mimic war under a merciless sun.

Today 5,000 of them attended services in the stadium of St. Lawrence University, at Canton, where Lieut. Col. Churchill J. Gibson, rector of St. James Episcopal Church at Richmond and chaplain of the Twenty-ninth Division, delivered the sermon. The processional was led by the band of the First Virginia Infantry and colors of more than a dozen regiments were massed at the altar.

Dr. Gibson told his soldier audience that the safety of any people depends upon their inner strength.

"The Inner Man Counts"

"If the inner man is weak," he said, "no matter how strong he may be in airplanes and tanks and other material things, he cannot win. It is the inner man that counts. If the inner man is weak, someone with greater inner strength will come and take his materials away from him and turn them against him."

Democracy, he declared, is "the political expression of the Christian ethic," under which "one man counts as one." The doctrine of superman, he said, is predicated on the doctrine of master and slave, while democracy "provides for the strong to protect the weak, to strive to end the inequalities and suppress injustices."

For men unable to make the long trip across the 1,700-square-mile Army area to Canton, services were held in their own regiments or brigades. The 169th Infantry, once New York's "fighting Sixty Ninth," mobilized 1,300 of their men and those of the 108th Infantry for a 9:30 mass. The Rev. Joseph M. Egan (Captain), chaplain and pastor of St. Bridget's Catholic Church in New York City, officiated. He was assisted by the Rev. John E. Rooney (First Lieutenant), assistant pastor of St. Peter's Catholic Church at St. George, Staten Island, who delivered the sermon.

Jewish Services

Jewish chaplains held services in each of the three corps areas. First Lieut Bernard Segal, of the chaplain reserve, Jewish chaplain of the First Army during maneuvers, officiated in the second corps. Lieut. Col. Benjamin Tintner, chaplain reserve, officiated in the First Corps, and First Lieut. A. Lev., chaplain reserve, officiated in the Third Corps.

After services and the noon meal, the men of the Army, except those on special duty, were free. Most of them went for swims in the rivers and lakes that abound here; many went on trips through the Thousands Islands and others sat on the American shore of the St. Lawrence, looking wistfully across to Canada, where strict Army regulations forbid them to visit.

Reveille at 5:30 a. m. tomorrow will bring them out of their tents for a week in which they will take the field as combat troops, fire hundreds of thousands of rounds of blank ammunition and spend three nights in field bivouacs.

New Tactics to Be Used

Tomorrow the two infantry brigades of the Twenty Ninth will engage in combat maneuvers, regiment against regiment, in which new infantry tactics will be used. In the Ninety-First Brigade, the First Virginia will oppose the 116th (Virginia) and in the Fifty Eighth, the First and Fifth Maryland will be opposed.

Tuesday the two brigades of the Twenty-ninth will be opposed, developing their battle with the new combat teams, consisting of a regiment of infantry with supporting artillery and necessary special troops. These maneuvers will continue through Wednesday, the brigades spending Tuesday night in the field.

Thursday and Friday will be devoted to division exercises, the Twenty-ninth and the Twenty-eighth, from Pennsylvania, with whom the Twenty-ninth was teamed at Manassas last year, in opposition. The divisions will spend Thursday and Friday nights in the field, returning Saturday in time to prepare for President Roosevelt's visit and radio address.

Plane Detector Test

For the first time tomorrow the Army's new aircraft warning system, developed over five years of secret experimentation, will be tried in the field. This device, according to official rumor, spots airplanes 10 miles away by picking up rays emanating from their engines, rays which can not be shielded.

A mock attack will be made by twin-motored bombers from Mitchel Field, L. I., and protecting pursuit from Syracuse and defense will be by National Guard observation planes based near here and by the provisional antiaircraft brigade, consisting of the 260th Coast Artillery (District of Columbia), the 198th (Delaware) and the Sixty-second (Regular).

The last convoy of the 260th arrived from Fort Ontario this afternoon and went into camp next to the 198th in a wheat field near Richville. The regiment will spread its guns out from there to protect Third Corps operations during maneuvers August 19-22.

Intensified Training

Near Rensselaer Falls, the District's 121st Engineers will continue and intensify the combat training it began last week. Tomorrow's work will consist in location and construction of barriers, ditches and road blocks, against tanks and other mechanized equipment. Tuesday each battalion will join one brigade of the division for brigade exercises.

Maneuvers Bring Stores All-Out Boom

By a Staff Correspondent

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 11.—This town and others in the First Army maneuver area shook themselves free of a golden shower today and gazed at shelves and counters swept clean of everything.

Last night was the first free of duties the more than 100,000 troops concentrated here have had since they began arrriving here a week ago. Ogdensburg wasn't prepared for it. Neither were Canton, nor Rensselaer Falls, nor Hueveltton, nor any of the scores of towns and villages which are business centers of the Army camps.

"The real results will not be known until tomorrow, when banks are opened and deposits start pouring in. Even the banks will be unable to measure exactly the new money left in these towns; much of it will be buried in old socks, hidden behind chimney corners and stuffed under lofts bursting with the summer's harvest of hay.

Storekeepers and restaurateurs last night were swamped. Not in their wildest dreams, when menauvers first were proposed in this neighborhood, did they ever conceive of the business they did in six short hours. It was beyond anything their experience had led them to expect.

Though business firms hired extra help and bought extra stocks, they were infinities away from being prepared.

After 10 p. m. a hot dog couldn't be bought in Ogdensburg at any price. Certain soft drinks were gone; chewing gum was found only rarely; milk was at a premium. Small establishments, patronized by the enlisted men, closed one by one until a man had nowhere to slake his thirst or still insistent hunger.

Town and village stores sold their shelves bare. Old stocks, even of stockings and dresses, went to men who wished to send something home.

An Ogdensburg retailer eyed the clamoring soldiers who filled the streets and sidewalks solidly from building to building with absolute amazement.

"We never expected anything like this," he said. "My stock is gone and it'll take me three months to get stocked up again for my regular customers. It'll take a lot of us three months to catch up."

Men and officers with clothing soiled by a strenuous week on the road and in the field either washed them themselves or tossed them into barracks bags against a better day. There was nowhere to have laundry done.

Laundry Turns Them Back

One large laundry in Ogdensburg was closed by a strike. The other ceased accepting work Saturday noon. It was swamped and soldiers with bundles stood in lines into the streets only to be turned away with, "We can't take any more work this week—or next week—or maybe the week after that."

This upstate New York country has never seen anything like it. Folks here knew some money would be brought in by the troops, but this was outside the realm even of imagination.

Mortgages will be paid off when the troops go home. Tax bills will be cancelled. Debts will be paid by farmer to farmer, to implement dealer, to storekeeper. A long needed good time has come to a district bent under years of depression.

Everybody in these parts is very happy today.

Soil Erosion Keeps 78,600 Busy in CCC

The Civilian Conservation Corps announced yesterday that 78,600 enrollees are engaged in soil conservation on farm lands in 40 States.

A survey has disclosed, the CCC said, that about 1,000,000,000 acres of soil are eroded to some degree. In the work areas of the CCC there are 28,894,960 acres. The corps has established complete erosion control programs on 9,352,208 acres.

Willkie Warns Book Advertisers

in giving free expression to candidates' views.

"If Mr. Willkie comes to Texas," said Elliott, "I will see that the Texas network gives him as much time as the Republican committee desires."

In a statement earlier Willkie said press reports indicated that "Boss Flynn of the Bronx (Edward J. Flynn), the newly appointed chairman of the Democratic National Committee, proposes to contiue the pernicious and illegal practice of extracting political contributions from corporations through the purchase by them of advertisements in the Democratic campaign book and the purchase of such campaign books."

"I wish to warn all corporations and their officials," Willkie's statement continued, "that such contributions are a direct violation of both the Federal Corrupt Practices Act and the second Hatch Act recently enacted by Congress.

"If I am elected President of the United States, all violations will be relentlessly prosecuted. . . . Likewise, all who participate, including solicitors, purchasers of advertisements and of campaign books, will be prosecuted for conspiracy to violate the law."

He further asserted that "anyone representing any political party" who engaged in practices similar to the sale and purchase of advertising in the Democratic campaign book "will be prosecuted."

"There will be no favoritism shown in the enforcement of the law," he added.

Prior Sales Don't Affect It

Willkie was asked whether the situation had not been changed by a statement of Oliver A. Quayle, Democratic committee treasurer, that advertisements for the book had been sold prior to President Roosevelt's signature of the Hatch Act amendments, August 2.

"That statement does not affect it," Willkie asserted. "I think it is outrageous, even though Attorney General Jackson has attempted to draw a distinction between the selling and buying of advertising under the Hatch law.

"I think such sales are a violation of the corrupt practices law in any event."

Quayle's statement, Willkie asserted, "is a rather weird defense from a moral standpoint."

"Immoral Defense"

"It would be clearly illegal to get the (Democratic) book together today," Willkie continued. "That (Quayle's) is the kind of immoral defense that will never be made about anything in my campaign."

"I feel very strongly about this thing," Willkie said. "I think such practices have been growths. I do not say that they are the responsibility of one party or another, but now is the time when they should be cleaned up."

The Hatch law prevents the sale of advertising, goods or other articles when the proceeds of such sales inure to the benefit of a candidate for Federal office.

During the day, the nominee read the foreign policy of his nomination acceptance address to Lewis W. Douglas, former budget director in the New Deal administration, and talked by telephone also with Gov. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota. Stassen, Willkie said, is arranging his campaign itinerary.

The Republican nominee said he would have a telephone conversation in the next day or so with Senator McNary (Republican), Oregon, the Vice Presidential nominee.

A.F.L. Predicts Gain in Jobs And Profits

1940 to See 3,000,000 Go Back to Work, Says Business Survey

A 23 per cent jump in industrial profits in 1940, over 1939 totals, and a reduction of the number of unemployed from the estimated 9,651,000 last June to 6,600,000 by next June were forecast yesterday by the American Federation of Labor.

At the same time it cautioned that the defense program, to which it attributed much of the industrial gains, "if not carefully guided . . . can disrupt our economic life, causing booms in some industries and depressions in others, destroy labor standards, leave men and mills stranded after the first years of intense activity are over."

The Federation, through its Monthly Survey of Business, declared that because of the President's control over defense policies, "our future depends to a degree never before known in peacetime on his decisions." It insisted, therefore, that "to insure balanced planning, representatives of trade unions, farmers' associations, business men's groups must sit on all policy making boards."

The Federal Reserve Board estimated, at the same time, that about 1,000,000 persons were taken off the unemployed rolls last year, but said that since the growth of population added more to the jobless rolls the net decline in unemployment had been "around half a million, and the number of persons out of work is still large."

121% of 1935-39 Average

In its monthly bulletin, the board rated July industrial production at about 121 per cent of the 1935-39 average. With this calculation was inaugurated a drastically revised index of factory output. The board's former index, under which the July figure would have been 117, was based on 1923-25 as a comparative period.

The 121 index for July compared with an identical figure for June, 111 in April, an all-time high of 126 last December, and 104 in July, 1939. Allowances for seasonal differences were made in the figures, to facilitate comparison of different months.

Another business report came from the Association of American Railroads, which said that export traffic through Atlantic and Gulf ports in July was approximately 79 per cent greater than in July, 1939.

Cars of export freight, other than grain, it said, unloaded at the ports mentioned totaled 46,554, compared with 26,058 in July of last year, while cars of grain unloaded totaled 2,009, compared with 6,383 a year ago.

The A. F. of L., reporting big increases in industrial profits, complained that "corporations have not increased wages as much as their earnings permitted."

It said that for the first half of 1940 profits of 400 corporations were up 59 per cent and earnings were 10.9 per cent on net worth, which it said equaled the percentage attained in 1937, the post-depression peak.

The survey reported that dividends in that period were up 14 per cent while workers' income rose only 4.9 per cent.

"Newly created wealth," it continued, "must lift the living standards of low-income groups. We need the flow of their buying power into non-defense consumer goods industries, to keep these industries growing in a normal way, prevent top-heavy defense development, build up our national well-being."

Policemen Serve Hotel as Bellhops

Burlington, N. J., Aug. 11 (AP).—Police Sergeant Clarence Bennett today ordered patrolmen on the night shift to "stop acting as bellhops" at the largest inn in town.

Bennett said the officers were in the habit of unlocking the Hotel Metropolitan door for nocturnal arrivals (the inn has no night clerk), register them, and then escorting them upstairs, grips in hand.

300,000 Dodged Draft in U. S., Bergdoll Only One Still in Jail

168,738 Apprehended Before July 15, 1919; Some Evaded Service by Buying Farm And Claiming Job Necessary to Defense

By the Associated Press

There were more than 300,000 "draft dodgers" in this country during the World War but Justice Department officials said yesterday Grover Cleveland Bergdoll was the only one of them still in jail.

BERGDOLL

A total of 337,640 persons were listed as draft deserters but 163,738 of them were apprehended and dealt with before July 15, 1919. Approximately only 150,000 men escaped the conscription machine entirely.

"It is beyond doubt," reported Army Provost General Crowder, "that thousands of registrants succeeded in evading service by removing to farms purchased by indulgent parents and by other like means undertaken subsequent to passage of the act, and that therefore, the system did not effectively prevent on the part of the registrants the evasion of its requirements."

Army records disclosed that 55,388 members of religious bodies opposed to war professed noncombatant religious creeds between June 5, 1918, and September 11 of the same year. Total claims for noncombatant classification numbered 64,693 but only 56,830 were recognized.

The first abbreviated course at the Army Industrial College will open today, with an opening address by Robert P. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of War.

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt and Helen Hayes, the actress, joined today in an appeal to send aid to Britain for her war against Germany.

Mrs. Roosevelt—whose husband is a major in the British army—said in an address prepared for a rally sponsored by the youth division of the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies:

"Let us send, without delay, all that we have to spare—airplanes, arms, munitions, supplies and ships."

Miss Hayes in her prepared address declared that defense of this country 'must begin with aid to Britain in the struggle to keep Hitler for gaining control of the Atlantic Ocean."

Head of Maritime Union to Run For Congress on Labor Party Ticket

Joseph Curran, president of the C. I. O.'s National Maritime Union is to become a candidate for Congress on the American Labor Party ticket, it was announced yesterday.

CURRAN

He will run in the 15th District, on the West Side of New York from Fourteenth street to Sixty-second street, now represented by Michael J. Kennedy, (Democrat.)

The union announcement quoted Frederick N. Myers, N. M. U. organizer, as declaring, in advancing Curran as a candidate:

"We need labor representatives in Congress to offset the poisonous influence of big business. A few labor Congressmen in Washington would have saved the New Deal.

"Because we have been lax, because we have permitted employers to elect our Representatives, we find ourselves faced with amendments to the Wagner Act, amendments to the wage-hour act, with WPA cuts and, finally, with the possibility of peace-time conscription—one of the most brazen antilabor measures of recent years."

Curran is 35 and married.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Representative Charles Halleck (Republican), Indiana, who placed Willkie's name in nomination before the Republican National Convention, will confer today on final plans for the Willkie nomination ceremony at Elwood Saturday.

The notification ceremony will begin at 3 p. m.; (C.S.T.) with Halleck presiding to present Dr. William Lowe Bryan, president emeritus of Indiana University, then Representative Martin, who will "notify" Willkie he was nominated June 23 for the presidency at the G. O. P. convention at Philadelphia. Willkie's acceptance speech, basis for his campaign, is scheduled for 4 p. m.

Bishop Francis Noll, of the Fort Wayne diocese of the Catholic Church will conclude the ceremonies with benediction.

Mr. and Mrs. Willkie expect to leave Colorado Springs, Colo., where they have been vacationing, on Thursday for Indianapolis. From Indianapolis the Willkie party will go to Rushville, Ind., home of Mrs. Willkie.

The Willkie party will set out for Elwood on Saturday morning from Rushville by special train, arriving in the Willkie birthplace around noon.

Roosevelt Today Renews Defense Tour

Rhode Island Air Base Site, Torpedo Plant On Schedule Today

By the Associated Press

Boston, Mass., Aug. 11.—Satisfied that "we are really getting into our stride" in titanic efforts to strengthen America's defenses, President Roosevelt took a day off from his tour of New England defenses today and loafed along the Massachusetts coast on his yacht, Potomac.

The yacht anchored for several hours at Cleveland's Ledge in Buzzards Bay, where bass, tautog, flounder and scup are running. Observers on shore thought they saw members of the Presidential party trying their luck with rod and line.

The Potomac transited the Cape Cod canal this morning, picked up John and Ann Clark Roosevelt, the President's son and daughter-in-law, and moved on to Cleveland's ledge.

"Very Much Pleased"

Mr. Roosevelt cruised out of Boston Harbor last night, after having spent Saturday inspecting the Portsmouth, N. H., and Boston Navy Yards and the Watertown, Mass., arsenal which makes big guns for the Army.

He told reporters he was "very much" satisfied with what he had seen.

"Things are going along awfully well," he said. "I'm very well pleased with all I saw today, and it shows we are really getting into our stride.

"I hope by late fall all the Navy yards and Army arsenals will be at full production. The cheapest way to produce war materials is to run at full production."

Sees Building Progress

His tour had given him an opportunity to see the progress of a $55,000,000 submarine building program at Portsmouth, construction under way at Boston on eight destroyers, two airplane tenders and four aircraft wrecking derricks costing another $55,000,000, and the machining at Watertown of guns ranging from 37-millimeter antiaircraft to 16-inch coast artillery rifles.

Resuming his inspection of defense installations tomorrow, the Chief Executive will visit the Naval War College, training station and torpedo plant at Newport, R. I., and cross Narragansett Bay to the site of a projected northeastern air base at Quonset Point, R. I.

The afternoon will be given over to a survey of the submarine base at New London, Conn., and the establishment of the Electric Boat Co., which builds submarines, at Groton, Conn.

Late in the day, Mr. Roosevelt will leave for Washington by special train.

Army Plane Falls Into Nevada Lake

Boulder City, Nev., Aug. 11 (AP).—An Army training plane fell from formation over Lake Mead, behind Boulder Dam, today, and crashed with its pilot, Lieut. Lawrence F. Wernberg, New York City, into 300 feet of water.

It was a BT-13 type plane being ferried with four others from the Vultee factory in Los Angeles to Kelly Field, Tex. The accompanying planes landed here. Crews began grappling in the water to locate the ship and the pilot's body.

Italy Cautions Friends in U. S.

Italo-Americans Warned Against Rousing Antagonism

Italian consular officials have launched a Nation-wide "hush" campaign to stifle anti-Italian sentiment in the United States, The Post learned yesterday.

Spurred by strong pro-British sentiment in this country and America's vast military expeditures, Italian officials in more than 60 American cities are seeking to prevent "incidents" that would further outrage American feelings.

Leaders of Italian groups all over the country, under direct orders from Rome, are being urged to avoid public statements "of a provocative nature." They have been warned to caution their members against similar utterances.

Marks Change of Policy

Marking a sharp departure from earlier tactics, which included energetic propaganda to cultivate pro-Fascist leanings in Italo-American groups, Italians in this country are being urged to avoid such activities as meetings and the display of the Italian flag during public outings and summer picnics.

This disclosure followed conferences between Vittorio Bifulco, acting consul at the Italian Embassy here, and the heads of several Italo-American groups in Washington.

A source at the embassy, who would not permit his name to be used, told The Post that Bifulco, who is also assistant counselor for emigration, acted in his consular capacity. He said he understood that similar instructions have been given all members of the consular service.

Washingtonians who received letters from Bifulco, Thursday, asking them to confer with him as soon as possible, included Antonio Mistretta, president of Loggia Cavaletti; Dr. Eugene Forcione, president of the Sons of Italy; Alfonso Fiore, president of Unione Fratellanza, and John Montello, president of Loggia Roma.

Message Confirmed

Dr. Forcione, who lives at 4521 Sixteenth street northwest, confirmed the nature of Bifulco's message after a conference with the acting consul yesterday morning.

He said he had been told that persons of Italian birth in this country can do nothing to aid Italy. He was asked to inform the members of his society at their next meeting to avoid "incitements" that might harm the Italian cause.

He reported that Bifulco said: "If someone gets up and talks against Italy, don't reply to him. It can't help Italy and it will only bring bad feeling."

He was told that the situation is "much different" than it was during the Ethiopian campaign, when more than $5,000 was raised among Washington's 7,000 Italio-Americans for the Italian Red Cross.

One Italio-American leader who said he did not receive an invitation from Bifulco was Alfonso Tana, president of the Lido Civic Club, whose statements after Italy's entrance into the war aroused strong antagonism among Fascist sympathizers here.

Fernando Cuniberti, Georgetown banker, who is president of the Washington Dante Alighieri Society, also denied that he had received Bifulco's communication.

The Dante Alighieri Society was accused in a recent memorandum issued by the New York City police department of operating schools at which the virtues of Fascism are magnified. Cuniberti said that no such schools are in existence in Washington.

U. S. Ability To Pay Defense Cost Debated

Ellsworth Alvord, Former Treasury Aide, Doubts It

The question of whether the country is financially able to pay for the national defense program was raised last night by Ellsworth Alvord, former special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury.

"Somebody," he declared during a debate on "The American Forum of the Air," nationwide broadcast from the Willard Hotel, "has got to suggest some way to increase the taxable income of the Nation." Otherwise, he said, the United States will find itself in "a very serious predicament."

His assertion precipitated a lively discussion in which Representative Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, emphatically denied the country was "so broke it can't pay for national defense." He said there was plenty of money and the national income was increasing every day.

Business Must Have Free Rein

The premonitions of Alvord, now chairman of the United States Chamber of Commerce's committee on Federal finance, were echoed by Representative Disney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Representative Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio, both members of the Ways and Means Committee, where defense revenue measures are under consideration.

Jenkins asserted business must be allowed to "go to work" and not be "squeezed to death," if national defense is to be financed. He said even with the recently imposed emergency defense taxes and the pending excess profits tax, "we are going to be running behind $20,000,000 a day."

He estimated the program would cost $15,000,000,000 dollars a year, at the least, just $1,000,000,000 less than "the net income of every individual, rich and poor, and every corporation in the country."

Referring to the national debt already amassed, he said "we want national defense and we want to pay for it, but the trouble is we are starting $45,000,000,000 behind the line."

Disney said "nothing is left to tax" since the money of the country "is not working."

General Raid on Federal Till

Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, diagnosed the trouble with the statement:

"The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker—everybody is trying to see what he can get out of the Federal till."

Early in the debate Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee's subcommittee on internal revenue, declared national defense discussions in Congress had been free of partisan politics. The rest agreed, but before the broadcast was completed Chairman Doughton observed that "this conversation borders on politics."

This resulted in a loud exchange between him and Representative Treadway, with both talking at once and neither being heard.

The debate was preceded by prepared statements from Representatives Treadway and Doughton. Treadway predicted the present financial situation of the Government would necessitate "drastically increasing the normal income tax rate" or a general sales tax.

Doughton said "we should, to as great an extent as possible, pay as we go," and called on patriotic Americans to do their bit.

Educators' Help in NYA Asked by Federal Officials

Responsibility for efficient administration of public funds for the purpose of helping needy youth continue their education rests largely with the teaching profession, a group of Federal officials told an educational conference which opened here Saturday.

The speakers, heard at the Hotel Mayflower by a joint session of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, United States Office of Education and National Youth Administration, included FSA Administrator Paul V. McNutt, NYA Administrator Aubrey Williams, Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker, Dr. Charles H. Judd, NYA official, and Floyd W. Reeves, chairman of the American Youth Commission.

McNutt pledged coordination of Office of Education and NYA activities, both of which are under his general supervision, with plans of private educators. Dr. Studebaker reported on the Nation-wide vocational education program introduced recently as a national defense measure. He said the enrollment is now 80,000 and is expected to reach 100,000 by September 1.

Dr. Judd urged the assembled educators, gathered here from the 26 States east of the Mississippi River, to establish councils of schoolmen in each State to provide professional supervision to assure maintenance of high standards on NYA student work projects.

"Above and beyond the execution of formal requirements, there is a duty which everyone who participates in the student work program should clearly recognize," Dr. Judd asserted.

"That is the duty to guarantee what no legislation can insure, namely, that all work projects will be qualitatively of high grade."

The approximately 100 delegates, comprising representatives of the various State offices of education, was estimated at 68 miles per hour. A fire at the big Savannah naval stores terminal, thought to have been caused by a falling power line, was brought under control.

Torrential rains accompanied the high winds. Thousands of beautiful trees were uprooted in Savannah and other coastal cities. Plate glass windows were shattered. Sand dunes melted away.

From Savannah northward to Georgetown, observers said the tides were highest on record. Power facilities failed here early in the afternoon and had not been restored tonight. The wind at times reached an estimated velocity of 75 m. p. h. here.

Warned of the approaching hurricane, authorities hurriedly evacuated thousands of residents and vacationists at the beach resorts which dot the shoreline. Refugees swarmed into hotels and other places of safety in towns and cities.

The Coast Guard divisional headquarters at Jacksonville, Fla., dispatched two emergency communication trucks to the Savannah-Charleston storm area. The trucks house a complete power plant and short-wave radio transmitting and receiving sets.

The Federal Diary

Sunrise to Sunset—or Longer Was Working Day in 1830

By Edward Ryan

A new plan for dealing with employes has been unearthed by enterprising executives in the Commerce Department.

The plan is roughly 110 years old, but in Government offices it's as new as tomorrow, and there has been talk that it might have uses in calming such employe suggestions as more pay, afternoons off when it's too hot to work and the five-day week.

The unique labor policy is almost certain to be shunned by operating officials of the department, but copies have been printed up to have around in an emergency discussion.

Founder of the policy, the document indicates, was Amasa Whitney, a New England barrel manufacturer, who announced the program to employes of his Winchendon, Mass., factory on July 5, 1930.

Whitney told his employes that the first rule would be to start work ten minutes before sunrise in all seasons of the year. From March 20 to September 20, they would stop work ten minutes after sunset, and the rest of the year they would stop at 8:30 p. m., except Saturdays, when the quitting time was at sunset.

According to Weather Bureau records, these would be typical working days. On March 21, the workers would start at their jobs at 6 a. m. and go home at 6:30 p. m. On December 21, they would begin at 7:15 a. m. and quit at 8:30 p. m. June 21 would give them a day beginning at 4:30 a. m. and ending at 7:45 p. m. On September 21 they would start at 5:45 a. m. and quit at 8:30 p. m.

Meal times were fixed for all seasons of the year, with the warning that during the winter the employes would take breakfast before going to work.

Whitney explained that "While I shall endeavor to employ a judicious overseer, the help will follow his direction in all cases."

Employes were not to leave the factory during working hours, and if they did, they would have to make up the time. If negligence or misconduct damaged machinery or impeded the work, the millhands would be required to make it up.

Anything tending to impede the progress of manufacturing during working hours, such as unnecessary conversation, reading, eating fruit or the like, had to be avoided, Whitney warned. About the only other things the employes were not allowed to do were:

Smoke—It is considered very unsafe and "particularly specified in the insurance."

Damage the machinery—If they did, they had to tell the overseer.

Leave work without four weeks' notice, "sickness excepted."

Stay around the plant after working hours—they had to get out in 10 minutes so the doors could be fastened.

Calendar: The Agriculture Symphony Orchestra, directed by D. Walter Bauer, will give the first of two concerts at 8:30 p. m. tonight in the Agriculture Auditorium. The program will include the Brahms Fourth Symphony, Russian Easter Overture by Rimsky-Korsakov, a tone poem by Henry Hadley, and Irmelin, by Frederick Delius. They will repeat the program at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow. The Treasury Department Recreation Association is planning a week-end cruise to Virginia Beach Friday.

Members of the Federal Playhouse will sail down the Potomac for a moonlight cruise Thursday.

lish an equivalent of any food already taken, permit imports from Russia and the Balkan states, allow free passage of ships "without attack" and permit adequate "control of distribution" by the proposed organization "so as to enable it to assure that these guarantees are carried out."

The second point called upon Great Britain to agree that ships carrying cargoes of food be allowed to pass the blockade of the British navy "so long as the guarantees are fulfilled."

The third point asserted that the de facto or "fugitive" governments of Holland, Belgium, Norway and Poland would be able to finance the proposed organization and pay for the food with their resources in this country and elsewhere. Mr. Hoover estimated that the food project would probably cost $20,000,000 a month at the start and $40,000,000 a month before the winter was over.

"Somebody must raise a voice for food supply during the coming winter to the 27,000,000 innocent civilians, mostly women and children, in Norway, Holland, Belgium and Poland," the statement said. "Possibly France also will be in difficulties. This subject needs clarification.

"It is impossible to understand what the Administration in Washington means by statements that they do not have any facts, or why they recall an Ambassador (John C. Grunby, Ambassador to Belgium) because he states a fact.

"The Belgians are always dependent upon imports for from 60 to 70 per cent of their food, the Dutch 30 to 40 per cent, the Norwegians 20 to 30 per cent, Central Poland as now set up about 30 per cent. France imports about 15 per cent.

"The situation will be even more acute than these figures imply because the farmers and villagers consume most of the domestic production and the cities mostly live on the imports.

In Washington, congressional leaders said they sympathize with efforts now under way to provide relief for millions of persons in lands conquerred by Germany, but warned that this aid must not be allowed to lighten the burden of Adolf Hitler.

Senator Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, said he was "heartily in favor" of Hoover's efforts but, added that there must be "absolute assurance that this food will not go to Germany."

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, doubted Great Britain would consent to relax her blockade.

Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said, "Hoover is right, and so are 130,000,000 other Americans who would like to help those poor people." He added, however, that "Hitler stole everything in Norway and Denmark. There is no reason to believe he wouldn't take any food we might send over."

London, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Great Britain is prepared to take a firm stand in rejecting any attempts to feed the population of the German-conquered nations of Europe, authoritative quarters said tonight. The British blockade cannot be lifted for any such programs, they declared.

The British view is that, even though the food relief was devoted exclusively to the invaded peoples, such help only would serve to help Germany's war efforts by relieving her of the great task of feeding these millions of people during the coming winter.

89 Foe Planes Felled in Day, Germans Claim

Crippling of Naval Base at Portland Reported in Berlin

smashed, ships burning in the harbor and other vessels sunk.

Besides one of the greatest air battles of the war over the whole coastal area from Portland, on the west, to Dover, on the east, DNB said side fights also developed as Nazi bombers, fighters and destroyer planes lashed out for air supremacy over the English Channel.

At one time, the German wireless broadcast that British planes were falling "like shot birds out of the sky" as radio and DNB bulletins, high command communiques and information from German military sources gave a running account of the mass aerial assault.

Separate from the Portland battle, Nazi military sources said, German raiders attacked a convoy of 70 merchantmen escorted by 14 warships in the English Channel off Margate, at the mouth of the Thames.

Crewman of the first fighter squadron returning from the attack reported hits on several steamers, including three which were set afire and one, a vessel of about 8,000 tons, which was sunk.

Another 8,000-ton ship was said to have suffered four hits and to have dropped, listing, out of the convoy, and a 5,000-ton merchantman was said to have remained behind burning.

DNB said the Channel was dotted with small vessels trying to rescue crews of downed British planes from the choppy waters and charged that one German craft downed by two Bristol-Blenheims was a plainly labeled German Red Cross seaplane.

One German Messerschmitt pursuit squadron was credited with bagging 22 British planes at a loss of only two of its own and another was said to have downed 16.

Windsors Hear Bishop Who Once Burned Their Picture

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

CHIC AS EVER—The charm for which Edward VIII gave up his throne was in evidence as the Duchess of Windsor chatted with a friend on arrival at Bermuda on the way with the Duke to Nassau

Hundreds Swelter Through Long Anglican Service in Bermuda Cathedral To Get Glimpse of Famed Couple

By the Associated Press

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 11.—The Duke and Duchess, of Windsor spent a hot morning in church today, listening to a sermon by the Bermudan bishop who once tore down and burned a picture of their wedding.

Several times during the long Anglican service the Duke mopped his perspiring brow with his handkerchief and once briskly manipulated a palm-leaf fan in an effort to cool himself and his wife, who sat beside him.

There was nothing in Bishop Arthur Heber Browne's sermon which could be interpreted as a reference to the Windsor's marriage or the British constitutional crisis which preceded it.

It just happened to be one of the hottest Sunday mornings Bermuda has had this summer. The rest of the congregation looked just as uncomfortable as the Duke and Duchess.

The bishop later said his sermon, based on St. Paul's Epistle to Philemon, had been written before he knew the Windsors were coming.

About 700 Bermudans and visiting Americans crowded Hamilton's Gothic cathedral when the Duke and Duchess, accompanied by Bermuda's governor, Maj. Gen. Denis Kirwan Bernard, and his sister, Mrs. Hastings Brooke, arrived at the church.

The Duke came first, in a carriage driven by two white-gloved, white-helmeted coachmen. With him were the governor and latter's aide de camp. The Duchess and Mrs. Brooke followed in another carriage.

The Winsors sat in the governor's pew.

Draft Bill Faces Week of Senate Debate

operation to bring about completion of emergency materials and weapons on specified delivery dates "and in accordance with the order of importance established by the strategic needs of the Army and Navy."

"Continuance of the proposed voluntary system depends on complete voluntary cooperation of Government and industry" to that end, it said, adding:

"The commission favors continuance of the voluntary system until it appears that more authoritative measures are required."

Willkie's Stand Awaited

Other facets of the national defense picture were:

Forces backing the Burke-Wadsworth bill looked to Wendell Willkie's speech next Saturday accepting the Republican presidential nomination with hope that he would approve the conscription plan in general.

The House Military Affairs Committe scheduled a meeting today for quick action on the Senate-approved bill empowering the President to order National Guardsmen and Reserves into active Federal service. The measure may reach the House floor Wednesday.

Members of Senate and House tax committees expected to conclude today hearings on the excess profits legislation which seeks to provide hundreds of millions annually toward meeting defense costs.

The House Military Committee arranged new hearings Tuesday on the conscription bill, with Secretary of the Navy Knox as a witness.

Preference System Asked

The commisison said it had asked Assistant Secretary of War Patterson and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Compton, cochairmen of the Army and Navy Munitions Board, to adopt a system of preference classifications designed to indicate th order in which the Army and the Navy require contracts to be executed by industry and that the system will be ready in a few days.

"General preference classifications to be employed are: Class AA, reserved for future emergencies of exceptional nature, and class A, consisting of such Army and Navy orders as require preferred treatment. Each of the above general classifications will in turn be subdivided as far as may be necessary. For example, AA1, AA2, A1, A2, etc.

"In addition to the preference classification, each Government contract or order will also carry a desired date of delivery and delivery date is the primary considerátion.

"A high preference rating does not mean that work on or delivery of orders bearing a lower classification or orders for private account or for export should be delayed, unless necessary to meet the delivery date on the order bearing a superior preference rating. As long as the delivery dates are met, details of adjustment will be left primarily to industry itself. It was stated that the Army and Navy, and the Defense Commission will, of course, be ready to assist in such adjustment."

The Commission said "there is little likelihood of shortages in most important materials and equipment used for the munitions program," adding that "all agencies connected with the defense program, including the Commission, the Coordinator of National Defense Purchases, and the Army and Navy Munitions Board, are meanwhile directing their efforts to preventing creation of acute situations which might cause delay."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley predicted that the conscription bill would pass by a "substantial majority sometime next week." He added it was possible the vote might come this week "but I wouldn't gamble on that."

70 Nazi Planes Felled, British Say

"minor damage was caused to two of His Majesty's ships by splinters" during the attack on Portland, and "bombs falling on the shore caused some damage to naval buildings, including a hospital."

The communique said "there were a number of civilian casualties, but few of these were serious."

Amplifying the Air Ministry's communique, the ministry's news coast," the news service reported. 7:30 a. m. (1:30 a. m. E.S.T.), continued at a furious pace until the afternoon, and broke out again mildly in the early evening when two bombers were destroyed off the east coast.

"There were three distinct points of attack: on Portland, on Dover, and on a convoy off the Anglian coast," the news service reported.

After hitting first at Dover, the Germans hurled a terrific attack against Portland shortly after 10 a. m. (4 a. m. E.S.T.).

"In this action, which lasted until lunch time, the enemy suffered their heaviest losses," the news service said. "Nearly 40 of them crashed on sea or land, when Spitfire and Hurricane squadrons roared in and out, breaking up their formations, zooming and diving and picking them off in a long series of dog-fights."

In the convoy action, British Spitfires surprised 40 Nazi bombers about to attack the convoy and dispersed them.

"Incidents included the destruction of ten new Messerschmitt-110 'Jaguar' fighter-bomber (combination combat and bombing planes) by one British Spitfire squadron which went into action four times throughout the day.

"It was an auxiliary squadron that shot down ten Messerschmitts. A regular squadron which had destroyed 21 German planes in Thursday's action, added five to its list on Sunday."

The 70 German planes officially reported shot down yesterday brought to 397 the total Nazi air losses tallied by Britain since the start of mass air attacks last June 18.

Weymouth and Portland were attacked inland as well as along the waterfront. In one place 40 houses were reported demolished and 150 others damaged in a 15-minute attack.

Several churches filled with worshipers who filed to services during the raids were hit. There was no estimate of casualties.

One southeastern coast town had at least four separate raids starting at dawn. There, alone, observers counted at least ten German planes downed in almost ceaseless dog-fights.

The raiders' cannon-carrying Messerschmitts blasted down at least three barrage balloons guarding the vital harbors, tons of bombs shook coastal towns, dive-bombers attacked shipping, and streets were splattered with machine-gun fire.

Britain beat at the raiders with the full strength of her coast defense system—showering attacking squadrons with anti-aircraft fire and hurling power diving counterattacks down on the bombers.

Guns Fire Net Of Steel at Nazis

like fly specks the noise detectors of the British defense batteries picked them up.

With my binoculars trained on the onsweeping raiders I heard Capt. R. S. Mont—he's a fruit grower in peacetime—ive the orders to fill the harbor front with a curtain of steel.

The "rattling guns" went into action, with a weird spine-tickling sound.

They belched great balls of cable which, out over the sea, dangled down from miniature parachutes.

Through this steel screen I saw several German airmen descending in their parachutes trying to avoid the steel tentacles.

A few minutes later I watched, as a daring Nazi pilot, with a Spitfire fighter hot on his tail, brought down a barrage balloon in flames and billowing black smoke.

The German planes in their relays of attacks swept down to 4,000 feet with a terrific whine of their motors and loosed their bombs, none of which struck the town itself because the Germans apparently had their hands full trying to break up the field of barrage balloons.

Hour after hour British Spitfire and Hurricane fighters battled the attackers and the men of the coastal defense batteries—most of them husky coal miners—stayed within a few feet of their antiaircraft guns every minute.

Between "alerts" the gunners played football on the cliffs or formed barber shop quartets. They ate their meals and had their afternoon tea on the sand-bagged parapets that are the only shields for their gun placements.

Last night had been a big night in the town, with the soldiers, sailors and airmen flocking to dance halls and dancing to the tiny player-piano grinding out "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby." At a skating rink they skated to the strains of "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

From a hotel roof I watched the first four raiders come over. The sun struck their black-and-silver bodies. As they roared in at 400 miles an hour antiaircraft guns began punching at them.

Hardly had the Nazi planes reached the coast when another swarm—much larger and composed of bombers and fighters—began taking form in the hazy distance.

Playing hide-and-seek in the clouds, the dive-bombers—shrieking little engines of death—maneuvered over the balloon field and then came roaring down, slipping through a terrific shellfire.

Two barrage balloons folded up when machine gun bullets ran a seam across their bloated surfaces, and went trailing to the ground in flames.

OPPORTUNITY RAPS — AND LOUDLY! Two maestros in search of a vocalist—that's Carr and Don of the Madrillon. If any of you girls figure you're an embryo Kate Smith or Bonnie Baker, just go to the Madrillon any evening between 7:30 and 1 o'clock, and step up to the mike and maybe you'll land one of the town's best canarying positions. Carr and Don don't care whether their next singer will be blonde, brunette or albino, but they do want a warbler with "oomph," a tricky singing technique, cleverness—and a voice.

From the Rumor Factory we hear that Arthur Todd, singing guitarist of the King Cole Room, is flirting with Meyer Davis again, may wind up as leader of a Maryland society orchestra this fall . . . That a notable dance team will soon sign a contract for a year's engagement in a Washington hotel. . . . That a new night spot may occupy two floors of a building at Thirteenth and H streets northwest.

"PENNSYLVANIA, 65,000" is the new and wildly rhythmic number used by the Neptune Room's new Three Star Trio ("Curly" Fox, Evalyn Tyner and Jimmy Smiley) to demonstrate their caliber. The Three Stars, all highly popular as individual Washington entertainers, are three times as popular and effective as a combination. It's unfortunate that their engagement is limited to this week because of previous bookings.

THE WANDERERS. In the New Barvarian we found Lotus' ringmaster, Bill Strickland. . . . Over in the Lotus the Anchor Room's own Eileen George was ringsiding and enjoying chow mein . . . Down in the Mayfair was a choice gathering of Lotus' Budy Shaner and dancers Marjorie and Bobbie hobnobbing with "Admiral" Jimmy Byrd and "Mousie" Garner, who was telling about his adventures with rats and cats. A galaxy of Nadine's Co-Eds from Maryland Club Gardens were over in the corner. . . . And out at Maryland Gardens who did we see but George Osmolski, manager of the Anchor Room. . . . Dancing around in the Rainbow Room (and not with a ball player) was Angie Rodante, who recently completed a singing engagement of more than a year in the Hi Hat across the street . . . Down in the Neptune Room were the Rainbow Room's leader, Milton Davis, and Violinist Durward Bowersox. . . . Night spots are such fun, y'see, that their entertainers prefer postmen's holidays.

Burt Stevens, who pianos so elegantly in the Cafe Caprice and on the Starlight Roof, is studying novachord and the instrument will probably be added to the Arthur Herbert Band this fall . . . The Starlight Roof closing date has been set for August 29.

NEW TERRACE REVUE. Beginning tday, the Shoreham Terrace will feature four dancing lovelies and five juggling comedians. The dancers are the Emerald Sisters and Betty and Sue Carlyle. The jugglers are the Five Jansleys, former Ringlingites, guaranteed for a perfect score of laughs.

RIVIERA LOUNGING. Harriet Derck's exquisite voice drifts over

in Noel Coward's "Experiment." She's changed its lyrics slightly, and for the better . . . There's Johnny Galliher, who's going to California to visit the Ned McLeans and leave our town minus glamour. . . . Pete Macias and his crew swing into the most maddening Conga ever written, "The Broadway Conga." Trust Manhattan to out-Latin the Latins.

Breeziest dance spot around town is Glen Echo's Spanish Ballroom. It's swept from end to end, crosswise and up and down by gales from batteries of giant electric fans. Breezy, too, is Paul Kain's dance music.

POST SPECIAL. Manager Louis, of the Rustic Cabin has a soft spot in his heart for Post readers. Today and Wednesday the Rustic Cabin will serve its regular Kentucky mint juleps—tall, frosty and potent—to Post readers for a mere 35 cents.

ALWAYS RIGHT. No matter what time you're down town, you'll be right in seeking refreshment in the Harrington Tavern. Excellently prepared breakfasts and luncheons offer sustenance for early in the day. Afternoon and evening cocktail hours and the nice popular-priced dinners round out the program.

MOODS IN MUSIC. There's a lovely glitter to Dick Koons' dance music in the Mayflower Lounge. And the orchestra's glee club singing compares favorably with much group singing you hear in theaters. . . . Sidney Boyd, of Maryland Gardens, is a graduate of vaudeville and musical comedy. You'll especially like his tenoring of light operatic tunes. . . . Those Hi Hat tunesters, Tom, Dick and Harry, have the perfect knack for playing the kind of tunes fancied by after-noon cocktailers—light, but with a lot of dash. . . . And you should hear Owner Fritz Miller, of the New Barvarian sing "Aloha" in Hawaiian. He can't speak Hawaiian, but he surely can sing it. . . . Rodd Raffell's big band at the Nightingale is always being compared with Glenn Miller's. It's the combination of star-quality arrangements with stellar young music makers.

"Schnoesty" is the name of the new sweetheart of Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room. "Schnoesty," a Schnauzer puppy, is a gift to Milt from Bert Bernath, the Fall Mall Room band leader last winter.

EVEN before there was a telephone, there was a laboratory—that of Alexander Graham Bell in Boston, where the telephone was born. That was 64 years ago, but the telephone is still being invented.
Telephone service is what it is today because engineers have never stopped working to learn more about speech and hearing. In the Bell Telephone Laboratories hundreds of scientists engage in constant research. The results? You can talk more easily and be heard more clearly today over the telephone because of these men of science.
From these Laboratories, among a thousand and one other things, have come new types of telephones, cables no thicker than your wrist carrying 4200 wires, even the wire networks over which nation-wide radio broadcasts come to you.
The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company—YOUR company—shares with the other twenty-three regional companies of the Bell System in the benefits of the Laboratories' research. And every telephone user benefits in the better service it makes possible.

'Magic Bullets' Cure For Many Diseases

Other Uses Found For Dr. Ehrlich's Syphilis Remedy

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

Portland, Oreg., Aug 11.—The "magic bullets" of Dr. Ehrlich, heretofore thought good only for syphilis, have been found at the University of Oregon Medical School to offer promise of value in the treatment of other widely different human diseases.

The experiments are reported in the current issue of Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics, by Dr. Edwin E. Osgood, associate professor of experimental medicine.

The Ehrlich bullets are complex compounds of arsenic. Heretofore, they have been given in large doses at long intervals. Dr. Osgood has discovered that by reducing the size of the dose and increasing the frequency, until the arsenic is like birdshot instead of bullets, it may prove an effective treatment for serious staphylococcus infections.

Cause of Boils

The staphylococcus is a frequent cause of boils, bone infections and general blood poisoning.

The experiments were made in rubber-capped bottles containing growing human bone marrow cells. This method of culturing human bone marrow is Dr. Osgood's invention and has become famous in medical circles.

With a hollow needle he draws marrow from the breast bone of a living person. This marrow is nature's factory for making some of the important cells of the blood. In the bottles, with food resembling blood, these cells live and react somewhat like humans to attacks of disease and to medical remedies.

Dr. Osgood took cultures containing about 100,000,000 cells infected with staphylococcus and divided them into equal lots. Thus he had several cultures all precisely alike.

Cultures Then Treated

Next each culture except one was treated with medical remedies, either some derivative of the new drug, sulfanilamide, or the arsenic compound, neoarsphenamine, now used generally for syphilis. The latter was tried because two Seattle physicians, E. Lecocq and J. Lecocq, had reported favorable results.

The cultures revealed exactly how much of the arsenic compound was needed to kill human cells and how much to kill the staphylococcus. The two amounts were distinctly different. Human cells lived in small concentrations equivalent to about six parts to 1,000,000 parts of blood.

But this same concentration killed virtually all staphylococci in 6 to 48 hours. Clinical experiments now have begun to apply this discovery. Indications are that neoarsphenamine "bird-shot" may be of value in serious staphylococcus infections of human beings.

Of the other remedies, sulfathiazole, a recently discovered derivative of sulfanilamide, gave the next best results, indicating that this new drug may be used for mild staphylococcus infections.

Troop Drills With Secret Plane Detector

Aircraft Warning Unit Tests Closely Guarded Device at Maneuvers

By Hanson W. Baldwin
Copyright by New York Times

Headquarters, Air Defense Command, First Army, Watertown, N. Y., Aug. 11.—On a rocky knob near Heuvelton in the First Army maneuver area are a few drab brown trucks and a small group of tents, well back from the road and—unlike the other units in the area—unidentified by designating signs.

This conspicuous but carefully guarded little camp contains part of the equipment of the First Aircraft Warning Company, part of the country's first air defense command—equipment so secret in its details that only a small part of the Army's personnel has seen it, equipment which has passed the laboratory stage, is now undergoing its final service test in these maneuvers, and shortly will be manufactured in small but sufficient quantity to provide one of the keystones of the air defense of the United States.

The device used here, which has been under development for the past five years, is an aircraft detector which operates on ray principle, and which, under favorable conditions, is believed to be able to detect planes considerably more than 100 miles away.

None of the officers or men attached to the air defense command which was initiated by the War Department last September and was actually established with headquarters at Mitchel Field, Long Island, last February, would speak of how the new device is operated or of the results obtained from it. But there is no secret about its existence, and even if civilians were permitted to see it, its extremely complicated technical nature would defy the average understanding.

Gen. George Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army, in justifying funds requested for the procurement of several of the detectors, told Congress recently that it was planned to place one or more of the aircraft detectors at Panama and Hawaii—about three on the Atlantic Coast and one or more on the West Coast.

The type of detector used at the maneuvers is mobile. That is, the equipment is mounted in trucks and trailers and can be shifted around from point to point and set up where desired. The type to be placed in the Canal Zone, Hawaii and along the coast, it is understood, will be fixed; that is, the installation will be permanent. Additional mobile detectors may also be procured, however.

The device, tested repeatedly in its experimental stages at the Signal Corps laboratory at Fort Monmouth, N. J., is believed to pick up the rays given off by a plane's engine. It does not depend upon sound, and has nothing to do with the famous listening "ears" or sound locators which pick up the sound of a plane's engine and are used with antiaircraft artillery. It has a far greater range than a sound locator and it is not believed that planes can be shielded to prevent detection.

Once Huge French Labor Union Dies

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Vichy, France, Aug. 11.—The French Federation of Labor—the famous C. G. T.—died quietly in Toulouse July 21. At a meeting of only 50 delegates the once powerful labor organization which four years ago boasted a membership of 5,000,000 decided definitely to abandon the doctrine of the "class struggle" which until now had been its animating principle.

In its place the federation voted to transform itself into a corporative association based on the idea of cooperation between capital and labor.

Leon Jouhaux, for more than 40 years head of the C. G. T., has gone into retirement. The organization is now directed by a bureau of four men, his former assistants: Georges Buisson, Chevalme-Ehlers, Lacoste and Bothereau. Rene Belin, the former secretary general of the C. G. T., has entered the Petain cabinet as minister of national production and labor.

War Cuts Tolls Of Panama Canal

Copyright by New York Times

Balboa, C. Z., Aug. 11.—The war reduced the tolls of the Panama Canal during the fiscal year ended June 30 by $2,516,346, and cargo handled by 567,611 tons, according to the current issue of the Canal Record, though cargo carried by United States vessels increased 3,475,237 tons to a total of 12,364,617 tons. The total of tolls for the year was $21,144,675, and of cargo 27,299,916 tons.

British traffic was reduced 429 ships and 1,619,205 tons of cargo. Nevertheless 11,039 ships carried 5,142,351 tons through the Canal.

No German ships have used the canal since the war started and their traffic was reduced by 306 ships and 1,339,501 tons of cargo.

Defeat and Loss Of Hope Crush French Refugees

Copyright by New York Times

Mont Lucon, France, Aug. 11.—On the refugee road two months ago there was fear but there was hope, if only hope of escaping from fear. The road back differs in this that hope has gone and resignation has taken its place. Those who are taking the road back are habituated to discomfort, to hardship, even in many cases to want or near it. They know what a dreadful thing it is to be refugees and defeated.

No home, whatever it may be, like their own place, their own beds, the possibility of saving something, is calling them.

Here in Mont Lucon and other places near the line which divides occupied from unoccupied France, one finds them in thousands packed in automobiles which have been two months on the road with all their belongings strapped on and tied with string. One passed an hour ago with seven people piled among their baggage and a bunch of gas masks hanging foolishly behind.

Permits and gasoline—these are everyone's principal preoccupations. To get the former one must wait patiently for a number, and there is always the probability that trains on road traffic will be suspended. Gasoline is doled out as sparingly as some rare wine, for indeed it is more precious and more rare. Here in front of the only pump which is operating there are at least 50 cars of all kinds waiting, among them a dozen carrying Belgian soldiers.

What are they going back to? That is the agony of doubt which marks the road back as fear of bombing from the air marked the road out. The sadness of all this is beyond description and makes it hard to believe that we are on the eve of any better organization of the world than with all its faults we knew before this catastrophe.

French Prisoners Forced By Nazis to Reap Crops

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Aug. 11.—The newspaper Petit Parisien prints interesting details regarding the policy of the German authorities of occupation in the matter of agriculture. According to the paper, the Germans are actively assisting in gathering the crops by allotting to farmers French prisoners of war as laborers "frequently in greater numbers than requested." The Germans also furnish gasoline for operation of harvesters, tractors and other machines. As soon as the harvest is completed they insist that other crops be sown, including garden, truck and other seeds.

Reich Women Get Day Off—to Wash

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 11.—The German ministry of labor has decreed that any employe absent from his job without a satisfactory excuse will have the amount of time he or she is absent deducted from future vacations due him or her.

The decree will not apply to women who remain home to look after domestic chores, especially washing. In order to avoid complication, the labor ministry suggests allowing women employes one day free, fortnightly, to do the family washing.

Youth to Get Chance In French Diplomacy

Vichy, France, Aug. 11.—France will rejuvenate her diplomatic corps in accordance with a decree published on the initiative of Foreign Minister Paul Baudoin. According to M. Baudoin, the guiding principle in promotions for French diplomats and consular agents will be henceforth based on abilities rather than seniority in rank.

Shanghai Withdrawal

While ordering the withdrawal of the British garrisons from North China and Shanghai, the War Office in London sought vainly to minimize the significance of that action. For there can be no mistaking the fact that the move involves a further and serious decline in British prestige in the Far East, plays directly into the hands of the Japanese and places the United States in a highly embarrassing position.

It is being pointed out in London that these garrisons were so small that they constituted more of a liability than an asset. They could not effectively resist serious attack by the Japanese. In the event of a clash, the British government would thus have had no alternative save to go to war with Japan or order an inglorious retreat. On the other hand, concentration of these troops at such a strategically important point as Singapore or even Hongkong would, it is argued, have a definite military value.

All this is unarguable. Yet the contention would have been equally true a month ago or six months ago when Great Britain gave no indication of any readiness to turn Shanghai over to the tender mercies of the Japanese.

The point is, of course, that at this moment Great Britain is fighting for her very existence. She cannot safely divide her engeries. That is why successive efforts have been made to placate the Japanese. It was done in the case of the dispute over Tientsin. It was done more recently when Britain ordered the closing of the Burma Road. But these attempts at appeasement have only whetted the appetite of the Japanese. Under pressure from Tokyo, therefore, Great Britain has now found it necessary to withdraw her garrisons from Peiping, Tientsin and, most important of all, Shanghai.

Not surprisingly, the International Settlement is stunned by the move. For some time the Japanese, directly and through Chinese puppets, have been in control of the Chinese municipality of Shanghai. They dominate the French concession. The small Italian garrison at Shanghai is entirely subservient to them. There is left only the American garrison of 1,200 officers and men as a symbol of the Settlement's independence.

These troops are to remain. But from now on, with a British major general no longer senior officer, the international defense forces, including the American contingent, will be commanded by a Japanese rear admiral. That the Japanese will make full use of this position of command to which they have fallen heir by the British withdrawal cannot be doubted.

Accumulated Needs

An important characteristic of the 1942 budget submitted by the Board of Education is that pointed out by Superintendent Ballou. The estimates, he says, are based on "accumulated needs" rather than plans for the future.

Dr. Ballou's statement should impress on the Commissioners the fact that there is nothing to be gained by putting off vital replacements in the school plant. For the current year the School Board asked $6,269,499 to finance new buildings and land. In cutting the total school budget from $18,775,499 to $13,150,000 the Commissioners reduced this item to $1,030,000. The amount finally approved by Congress was $811,000.

The 1942 estimate of $18,346,369 includes $5,561,477 for new buildings and grounds. Part of this amount would be used to replace schools pronounced unfit in a survey completed last year by District officials. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, contended in her letter accompanying the tentative budget that many pupils must study in buildings which are "a disgrace to the Nation's Capital."

The reason given by the Commissioners in past years for lopping off educational funds has been that the Budget Bureau would do it anyway. Now that the District has been granted discretion over details of its expenditures, this excuse no longer exists.

The Commissioners have a clear responsibility to remedy conditions under which present pupils suffer, and to avert a future budgetary problem which might defy solution. If they continue to delay bringing the school system's physical plant up to requirements a year will come when accumulated and immediate necessities will be wholly beyond the financial capacity of the District.

The Old Grab Game

Certain Senators from Midwestern and Southwestern States are reported to be on the warpath because their districts have allegedly been slighted in the allocation of defense orders. They are also said to be indignant over the failure to locate defense plants in their part of the country. Senator Clark, of Missouri, who belongs to this disgruntled contingent, has already opened fire on the tax bill. And Senator Miller, of Arkansas, hints that efforts will be made to obstruct passage of that bill if the Defense Commission shows favoritism toward the seaboard States in awarding contracts.

Threats of this sort are peculiarly disheartening, because they show only too clearly that there are members of Congress who consider it more important to grab defense funds for their constituents than to make sure that the defense program is carefully planned to provide maximum security for the entire Nation.

If the allocation of contracts were to be determined by political pressure in accordance with traditional "pork barrel" methods of distributing Federal largesse, the defense program would be intolerably delayed in getting under way and serious wastes of public money would result. Of course, every effort should be made to avoid favoritism, and to distribute orders over as wide a geographical area as is possible without sacrifice of time and money. But, as Mr. Knudsen has pointed out, it is essential that contracts be given to firms already in operation in order to obtain quick results.

In selecting sites for new plants it is also necessary to take into account many factors, such as adequacy of local transportation facilities and of labor supply, and nearness to raw materials. In other words, a well coordinated defense program designed to secure maximum output with minimum delays and without loss of money must largely ignore the claims of a State or a city to "its share" of the funds to be spent. It is this kind of competition for Federal funds that has resulted in the dissipation of vast sums voted for improvement of our inland waterways—funds that could have been spent to infinitely greater advantage if the national need instead of selfish sectional demands had determined the character of the spending.

If this spirit of short-sighted sectionalism were to be encouraged it would doubtless become a major threat to the defense program, seriously handicapping intelligent planning and efficient execution of defense orders.

"Occupation" Marks

The currencies of most of the countries of continental Europe are no longer quoted in New York. So long as the war continues it is useless to expect that order will emerge from the chaos of the European exchanges. And, until the outcome of the war is known, it will be impossible to foresee what kind of currency system or systems will follow the restoration of peace.

Scanty reports from abroad indicate, however, that if Germany should retain her hold on the occupied countries she may prefer to continue the present system of diversified currencies.

In Poland, where a complete breakdown of the banking and credit system resulted from the German invasion, a new zloty currency had to be introduced. But in occupied countries where the banks continue to function, the Nazis have confined their currency issues to Reich credit-office notes, popularly known as "occupation" marks, which are used by the army for local payments only. These marks are circulated at a fixed value in terms of the local currency and obviously must be accepted in payment by the conquered peoples.

For payments between the Reich and the occupied countries, however, a system of clearing accounts has been established.

From the German viewpoint there are many advantages to permitting the countries under Nazi control to retain separate currency systems. The reichsmark circulation has already experienced a tremendous increase, amounting to nearly 50 per cent during the past year. The needs of the army are given as the principal cause of this inflationary expansion. To permit further additions to the note issue to take care of currency needs in occupied areas would certainly be ill-advised under the circumstances.

While "occupation" marks are technically liabilities of the Reich, they belong in a separate category from note issues circulating in Germany, and the volume issued can be better adjusted to current needs. Furthermore, there is a possibility that eventually the invaded countries may be called upon to assume liability for these emergency mark issues. In any case, the problem of credit and currency management is greatly simplified by leaving the local governments a certain amount of autonomy in this field.

Whatever the superficial currency pattern of continental Europe may be after the war is over, there is no doubt that Germany will, if victorious, "tie" the currencies of all subject states to the reichsmark and dictate the terms on which she is prepared to transact business with those areas. The disappearance of the gold and foreign exchange reserves which once regulated the volume and helped to determine the value of European currency issues may, indeed, make some kind of arbitrary control of exchange relations essential.

On Banning Strikes

Roughly four out of every five persons participating in a current Gallup poll believe that strikes in industries manufacturing materials for national defense should be forbidden by law.

This overwhelming majority probably does not indicate any profound anti-labor bias, but it does reveal a strong conviction that labor disputes should not be permitted to delay the rearming of the Nation. The vote is an unmistakable warning to organized labor to avoid strikes growing out of jurisdictional disputes and petty grievances.

It would be a great misfortune not only for organized labor but also for the country at large if workers should be deprived of the right to strike. Yet it is conceivable that such a drastic step might have to be taken. Indeed, Federal control of strikes would be unavoidable if labor unions were to walk out frequently and heedlessly, without regard for the effect of their action upon the progress of industrial preparedness.

The country should not forget, however, that labor is in special need of protection against exploitation in times of emergency. The right to strike, even if it is not resorted to, has a deterrent effect upon unscrupulous employers who might otherwise make the emergency an excuse for unreasonable demands.

The mere banning of strikes, furthermore, would not assure smooth functioning of the industrial machine. The best insurance against work stoppages due to industrial disputes is to be found in firm leadership within labor organizations, and a disciplined willingness of the rank and file to submit differences of opinion to peaceful arbitration.

Recently there have been many indications that responsible labor leaders are alarmed by the prevalence of jurisdictional disputes among local unions. And greater efforts are being made to bring about settlements of these inter-union quarrels without suspension of work.

In disputes between workers and their employers outside mediatory agencies are, of course, required. The Conciliation Service of the Department of Labor is an extremely useful agency whose value would be further increased if its resources were greater. An increased willingness on the part of industry and labor to seek peaceful solution of their differences would also add to its effectiveness.

If organized labor is wise, it will note the signs of public impatience and disgust with obstructionist union activities that menace the public welfare. If it wants to preserve the right to strike, it should take care not to abuse that right in this period of crisis.

Foiled Again

An ancient tradition of antipathy has resulted in the drawing of blood in a strange way, according to a dispatch from Berlin. The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung reports a duel between an actor and a critic in Nazi-occupied Copenhagen.

In all the years that there have been actors there have been critics, and the critics have had the best of it. Even before they had access to the press, judges of the drama could bring choice products of their gardens and poultry yards with which to compliment the entertainers. The unhappy artists had to take it on the chin, and they have been taking it on the chin, figuratively, ever since.

Therefore, the Dane who got a chance to shoot at a critic will have the envy of thespians everywhere—even though his weapon was only the long bow. (Firearms are forbidden by the Nazis.) In the presence of the lady whose professional dignity he was defending, the gentleman of the stage shot an arrow into the air. It fell, he knew not where, and he was pinked in the arm by his opponent's shaft. Supporters will regret his aim, but in a measure they will feel that honor has been satisfied.

The White Steps

John O'Reo in the Baltimore Sun.

A columnist of The Washington Post, Pendleton Hogan, writing on the white steps of Baltimore—he makes the point, by the way, that as a sort of trade-mark they are valuable to the town—asserts that he can obtain no information as to how Baltimore came to have white steps in the first place.

The explanation is unromantic. It is simply that when the older part of Baltimore was being built, white marble was the cheapest ornamental stone available, because there were great marble quarries at the very edge of the town. Since it makes a pleasing contrast with red brick, contractors used it lavishly, and, once some thousands of the better houses were equipped with white marble steps, it became the fashion to paint the wooden steps of the cheaper houses white in imitation of marble. These are the simple facts.

Conscription And Defense

Slaves or Free?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are American citizens slaves or free men? Have they individual rights of liberty and independence, or are they but puppets in a marionette show, to be worked in accordance with the ambitions of those in positions of authority? Is the patriotism of our men so small that they have to be forced to fight to defend the country against invasion? When the powers that be seek to railroad through Congress a conscription act, it does indeed appear that the men of these United States are considered as mere pawns upon the chessboard of international affairs.

Behind all this wild haste to inflame the people with the fear of invasion by a foreign foe and thus get control of the man power and money of the Nation—lies what? Can it be to send our men to foreign shores? If this is not the reason, why the draft? Our men are willing to enlist to defend our Nation, but only by the draft could they be forced to again go abroad and fight the battles of Europe.

THE REV. ALFRED H. TERRY.
Washington, Aug. 8.

Classification

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those favoring the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military service bill may be roughly classified as follows:

Octogenarians who are safely above the age limits of those to be regimented.

Army officers whose prestige is enhanced in proportion to the number of their fledgelings.

Congressmen who are exempt from the provisions of the bill.

Super-patriotic women who don't know what it means to have to support dependents.

Chambers of Commerce and other groups whose members will get fat on the orders necessary to maintain a large army.

SEYMOUR ETKIN.

A Grave Responsibility

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is hard to believe that those who express opposition to the enactment of a conscription law, and those others who later will join with them to vote against the passage of such a law have adequately considered the (at least) possible results of their opposition. One result of this opposition may even now, it seems to me, be predicted with entire assurance (assuming that either by volunteer or enforced enlistment our Army is enlarged) namely, that our defense would be committed largely to those who either through highly patriotic motives, or sheer need were led to enlist.

The announced opposition to conscription, on the part of many, seems to be because of their unwillingness to harm our "democratic way of life," but isn't the very essence of democracy equality of obligation as well as of opportunity?

Again, have these gentlemen considered that their opposition to conscription might well mean, that because of it we should be forced to the inexpressibly tragic need of sending untrained youths to meet an enemy of unprecedented effectiveness?

Are those who oppose conscription willing to assume that tragic responsibility?

Small, Professional Army Urged

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is regrettable that so many of the advocates of the Burke-Wadsworth bill take the position that those resisting its enactment are opposing the only possible method of raising a strong, modern Army. In fact, the best reason for the defeat of this bill is that it represents such a completely unsound method of strengthening America's defense.

The whole problem of training men for our national defense must be approached from a different angle if the country is to avoid spending a colossal sum and getting practically nothing for it.

If a strong defensive force could be created by forcing countless free men into the Army against their will at a pay of $21 a month for one-year training periods, and by causing untold hardship on all those dependent on the earnings of these unfortunate draftees, there would at least be some argument for the proposal. The day has passed, however, when great masses of civilian soldiers, trained in a one-year program of the type proposed can be built into an effective army. The last war, which was a contest between such huge, unwieldy civilian armies, had a great deal to do with teaching that lesson.

Imperial Russia represented the extreme example of the use and effect of these World War tactics. By 1916 the Czar had raised an army of almost 16,000,000 relatively untrained peasants without a fraction of the officers or skilled men necessary to lead them. The only visible result was to tremendously increase the rate of slaughter and to pave the way for a bloody revolution.

Military experts on both sides agreed on the futility of great, unwieldy offensive actions with masses of relatively untrained men. The Allied high command, however, continued to rely on the efficacy of the old system for the purely defensive job of holding the position it had won. In vanquished Germany, however, military thought turned to the problem of developing a new type of offensive machine sufficiently effective to overcome the defensive tactics the Allies had used in the World War, and on which they were continuing to rely should Germany attack again.

The German solution to that problem is now well known to us all. It is based on the use of relatively small numbers of extremely well-trained, fast-moving troops.

Because of the magnitude of supply and transport problems in an assault on this hemisphere, only this new type of offensive is possible. An even more mobile and shifty force would be required to defend such a huge, sparsely settled area of islands and continents.

For our Army, therefore, we need a force of only about 500,000 well-trained, picked men who are willing to make the problems of modern warfare their life work. Such a force can only be realized by raising the standard of pay and opportunity to a level that will attract good men and make it worth their while to stay in the service.

We have been told that it will cost from $800,000,000 to $1,100,000,000 per year to put conscription, as proposed by the Burke-Wadsworth bill, into effect. This is too much for even the United States to spend on a training plan that can only create an Army 20 years out of date.

Why Apologize?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is alarming to hear the militant words of those who would save America by faith and the apologetic words of those who favor facing the facts.

Britain is bracing to take her turn alone, with inadequate armaments. We admit we haven't adequate armaments if we had to take it alone. But our inadequate armaments added to Britain's inadequate armaments would become formidable, could be decisive.

It is because we cannot rely on the armaments we have that we are preparing armaments we can rely on. If in the meantime we hold to the old ones until Britain is lost, we can't get the new ones ready in time to be of use. But if we use the old ones now, we may not need the new ones. There are situations which call for deliberation and situations that require recklessness. It is a reckless force we are confronted with, a force that has come dangerously near to winning its goal by reckless methods. The only thing that can stop that force now may be equal recklessness. The Germans are throwing in everything they have. If we do less, we will deserve the economic disaster that will certainly come over us if Britain falls, for the signs of what will come are before our eyes.

Our youth are not needed on foreign battlefields. What Britain needs is every piece of armament we can send, old if we haven't new. They have pleaded for more armaments, willing to buy, pay for them, to fight a war as much in our defense as theirs. If we made Britain a present of our armaments and it turned the tide, it would be the cheapest defense we ever had.

Does Britain want to buy our antiquated destroyers, tied up in flocks, idle? We hunt out an old law as antiquated as the ships, which keeps them tied to our shores. The tie can be cut. We have planes, we have guns, rifles, ammunition, we have ships. If they are not now required for our defense here, why don't we put those armaments on those ships, transfer title and get them on the way to where they are needed for our defense? Are we dull? Or may we take the risk of asking again whether the Fifth Column shifts our scenery?

More Fighters Needed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A correspondent of August 1 voices a complaint which is probably echoed by a million young men who want another year in college, want to get married and want to be writers. However, facts must be faced. Even embryo writers should keep up with the times. The United States has a war just around the corner. We have too many writers and not enough fighters.

I wanted to go to college, to get married and to be a writer (money, easy hours and long cheroots) but had to buckle down and support myself at less interesting work. I married when I could afford it and fortunately by much work, little vacation and no cheroots, over a period of 50 years, have been able to support my family and help feed infant would-be writers of the next generation (who will have to work for a living in their age and maybe fight as well). I am thankful that I am on the giving end rather than the receiving end and I attribute the fact to my working at whatever came to hand instead of being choosy.

The Post Impressionist

Red Cross Group

"BONJOUR Mme. Benney," said Omar, the French butler. "You are the first arrival this morning, it is only 9 o'clock." "Ah bonjour Mme., A.! You are both the first ones."

Mrs. A. set her perky little hat on the brocade settee in the anteroom. I proceeded in the powder room and left my brick-red hat on the red upholstered chair where I always leave it. While doing so I heard the lovely deep voice of Miss C. who was carrying her own portable sewing machine into the spacious dining room, turned into a sewing room, which we ladies think could compete with those of the rue de la Paix. Instead of the Opera and the "Grands Boulevards" for an outlook here are lovely terraced gardens, the shade of tall green oak trees, the scent of sweet honeysuckle, and the mooing of a cow at a distance. The little birds singing outside of our window made Miss C. reminisce of Robert Burns. "How can ye sing, ye little birds, and I sae weary fu' o' care."

I sat in front of the sewing machine especially arranged for me by Omar and continued at the green woolen dress which I had started the week before. (We stitch them in red. It gives a light touch.) Very soon Mrs. J. came accompanied by Mrs. T. who is one of the "knitters" and belongs to the artistically book-lined library group, where knitting ladies take time in meditation. Mrs. J. calls herself an "assistant" and does the hardest work. She gives all of the finishing touches to the dresses that the machines turn out, such as button holes, Red Cross tags, sizes, etc.

Mrs. S., with her beautiful and spiritual smile which can brighten any dark corner, soon came in and greeted me in French. She was followed by Mrs. D., whose reaction to Hitler and blitzkriegs is definitely stimulating. She can also breathe life into the dullest subjects. Bad news came while we were busily engaged in perfecting our little Red Cross garments, but we kept full control of our emotions. Mrs. S. wanted to leave an affectionate message in the pocket of the little blue dress she was making. She had put so much of her personality into it that I encouraged her in the idea with the comment that this world would be a much better place to live in if more of us would think and act in such a human way.

Mrs. K., the generous hostess who has turned her house into working quarters for the Red Cross and into a cafeteria for our benefit, came down and greeted each of us individually. She took her place with us, pressed and put in place all of the finished garments to be delivered at the Red Cross headquarters the next day. Her daughter-in-law, Betty B., with her creative ability, furnishes the decorative touches with bits of gay colored wool to our masterpieces in which we take great pride.

We missed Pat, a young lady who left for a short vacation with much reluctance, fearing that Hitler would play some of his tricks as soon as she had her back turned.

When 6 o'clock came we were hardly aware of it. We left Mrs. K. still at the ironing board and 17 dresses ready to be taken by her to the Red Cross headquarters the next day.

Into every stitch we put love and sympathy for the little Suzannes, Yvonnes or Jacquelines and their elder sisters who may wear those garments. May God bless them all and comfort them.

MARIE C. BENNEY.

From The East Indies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter just received from the Dutch East Indies, so much in the spotlight these days, gives some interesting facts worth knowing about that wealthy colony still under the Dutch flag. People there live under very peculiar circumstances in a colony with an occupied mother country. The Fifth Columnists, of which there were quite a number, also government employes, were well taken care of; they were brought to an islet in the Bay of Batavia, called Onrust (Unrest). They were the people who caused retaliatory measures in the German-occupied mother country. Colonial officers on leave there were transported to a concentration camp according to a news item which we read in the Dutch American Chicago weekly, Onze Toekomst (Our Future).

People in the Dutch East Indies do not think their territory will be invaded immediately (the letter is dated June 23). But they do not take any chances and are preparing for every emergency. There is great interest in first aid courses. There is talk of evacuating children to estates in the interior if necessary. There are restrictions on export of money, F1500 being the maximum amount that can be taken out of the country. Persons liable to military service are not allowed to leave the country. The United States is presented as the country from which salvation must come. There is hope that England will hold out. American broadcasts are listened to.

How long will the Dutch still enjoy the privileges which have been theirs so long? Nobody knows. But they will certainly fight just as the mother country has done.

Holding The Rock

By Gen. Sir Alexander Godley

Former Commander-in-Chief at Gibraltar
(Special Correspondence of The Post)

Gibraltar A "Tough Nut To Crack"

GIBRALTAR still remains the key of the Mediterranean.

Conditions have changed very much since I was Governor there. But there are certain factors which lead me to think that, in spite of all modern developments, the fortress is still a very tough nut to crack, and that there is every chance of our being able to hold it again against siege, as we did from 1779 to 1783.

Then, the fortress was attacked by France and Spain. Now it will be attacked by Germany and Italy, possibly with the good will, if not the active collaboration, of non-belligerent Spain.

The factors in question may be considered from the point of view of the three elements and the three fighting services.

THE AIR: Gibraltar has already been attacked by German, Italian and French aircraft, with little result.

I believe it to be difficult for hostile aircraft to obtain good results. Our antiaircraft defense is up to date and ample. The Rock presents a very small target. It is only 3 miles long by 1 mile wide, with its top, 1400 feet, a knife-edge.

To be sure of hitting the harbor, the town, or Europa Point, the only worthwhile objectives, airplanes would have to fly very low.

To do this is particularly difficult and dangerous owing to the tricky winds, and innumerable air pockets which surround it.

Facilities now exist for the Royal Air Force and the Fleet Air Arm to take a hand.

THE SEAS AND THE NAVY: Now that the French fleet is practically disposed of, our naval situation in the Mediterranean would seem to be reasonably secure, and I see no reason to believe that our sea communications with the fortress can be severed.

During the great siege, an attack from the Spanish coast by sea, across the bay, by "battering ships" and fire ships was repulsed with great slaughter.

THE ARMY AND LAND ATTACK: Hitler already has large forces along the Pyrenees, the gateway to Spain, and I have seen it stated that there are large numbers of Germans in Spain, posing as civilians.

But it must be remembered that the only approach to Gibraltar by land is by a very narrow isthmus. The flanks of this isthmus rest on the sea, one along the Bay of Gibraltar, the other along the Mediterranean. The isthmus is very strongly defended with every conceivable obstacle to tanks and mechanized forces.

There is no question of turning the flanks of the defense by land. The sea flanks would be closely guarded by the navy and the fleet air arm, who would also render effective assistance to the direct defenses of the fortress.

Consider now the question of the heavy artillery and gunpower of the fortress.

This is absolutely up to date, with the most modern armament of heavy guns, so sighted as to be able to deal effectively with hostile guns emplaced either on the Spanish mainland or at Ceuta on the Africa coast.

During the Spanish civil war, Gen. Franco had heavy guns installed northwest of Algeciras, in positions which were well known to the garrison of the Rock. They may be there still. If they are they are well within range of our guns.

Big and long-range hostile guns, farther inland in Spain, would have a nuisance value, but would not affect the security of the fortress.

THIS BRINGS ME to the point that both as regards bombing from the air and shelling from the land, Gibraltar has wonderful facilities for shelter.

The Rock is honeycombed with galleries, tunnels and caves, and, in the town itself, the old casemates, wall and places of arms are of great strength and solidity.

For the last two years, deep underground shelters have been dug below these, and in the Rock itself I believe there is now ample bombproof accommodation for the whole garrison and population of the fortress.

There remains the question of food and ammunition. There are, no doubt, large stores of both, and as long as we have command of the Mediterranean there is no reason to fear but that further supplies can be insured.

The water supply is ample, and I believe that any damage done to the water cachements can be made good by the use of wells.

The importance of the Rock goes far beyond the question of prestige. Every British child for generations has learned to regard Gibraltar as an impregnable fortress. Its downfall would be a considerable moral blow to us.

But now that Italy is in the war, there is this further point: Capture of Gibraltar by the enemy would enable Italian submarines to pass out to the Atlantic and harry the ships bringing food and supplies to this country.

Now weigh up the considerations I have set down and I think you will agree with me that the Rock, if not impregnable against the modern instruments of warfare, will at least put up a prolonged fight against any attack.

So Mussolini's submarines will be bottled up in the Mediterranean for some time to come.

The Summer Theater Star Speaks

I've been in so many barns I instinctively follow barn swallows in flight.

I've been in a cowshed atmosphere so steadily that I'm uneasy when I can't reach out and pet a heifer.

I've developed a cackle and could lay an egg if the script called for it.

I am sick of studying parts on verandas, rafts, floats and in rowboats.

Even rehearsing with a handsome leading man in a canoe has become a bore.

* * * *

I am weary of dressing behind a carriage and awaiting a cue under a wagon.

Nothing would give me greater relief today than making up in a mirror and not seeing a hen, a horse, a cow or an old sleigh.

I long for a dressing room where the dresser is not an oat-bin and where the chair is not an inverted milk bucket.

I am weary of people whose shopping list reads, "one dozen eggs, a pound of butter, a loaf of bread, a quart of milk and two tickets to the matinee."

I am fed up with box offices with pigeons roosting on 'em.

* * * *

I am sick of stages so narrow that an actress who gets through a scene on them is practically a tightwire walker, and of stages so short she barks her elbows in every embrace.

I have played under so many low ceilings since July 1 that I have developed a stoop and am looking for a play in which I can play a midget.

I have seen so much terrible scenery that a Minsky backdrop for a comedy scene would seem something by Urban.

I have been surrounded by so much bad furniture that a soft pillow on an automobile bumper would be my idea of de luxe and restful equipment.

I am weary of property men who go out to get a Louis XIV drawing room set and come back with two kitchen chairs from the Stony Creek House and a hair sofa borrowed from the milkman.

* * * *

I am fed up with playing so close to the audience that the performance is really a huddle with a bunch of summer vacationists who came in because there was no movie house in town.

I am weary of leading men who always have snake, ptomaine or ivy poisoning.

I am sick of studying roles under grapevines to an audience of spiders, bats, field mice, stray kittens, baby chicks and crickets.

I yearn for two hours in a theater again without bumping my head on a low doorway or twisting an ankle on a ladder.

I am so sick of audiences in slacks, pajamas, shorts and negligee that if I ever get a chance to play to an audience with all its clothes on again I will do it free.

* * * *

I long for a stage electrician who understands electricity.

I crave for a stage far removed from anybody who serves clams, sweet corn or blueberry pie.

I am a Summer Theater Actress!

Letter To Germany

HERMANN SCHULTZ, of Chicago, a fictitious character and a member of the German-American National Alliance, writes to his brother, Emil, of Hamburg, Germany as follows:

Heil Hitler!!
Dear Brother:

Knowing something of the sacrifices which you are so nobly enduring for the glory of our race, I would be ashamed to be crying under the persecutions which the German minority in the United States are forced to suffer. I am not crying, dear brother, for we are strong, and we shall hold out until the hour of deliverance, but I feel that you should know that we, too, in our way, are fighting the great fight.

The United States, like Poland, Norway, Belgium and The Netherlands, is preparing to attack our dear Germany. Every hour one hears and reads of preparations for war, and it is obvious that these preparations are directed against Germany. Yet, if we do anything to prevent this reckless outrage we are accused of disloyalty, even though we are naturally Americans and, in our great love for the United States, only want to spare our dear adopted land the terrible and righteous revenge of our Fuehrer.

Heil Hitler!

We are a distinct minority who should have minority rights, and we are organizing to elect to the next American Congress only Representatives who promise to respect our rights and resist this evil warmongering which goes on all about us.

WE SHOULD LIKE to insist that our Representatives in Congress be permitted to conduct their debates and write their documents in the German language, for it is an insult to our race that they are now required to express themselves in the language of the enemy—the British swine. However, we are not yet ready to press that point or to insist that our children in the public schools be permitted to have separate classes in which they will not be compelled to associate with such riffraff as Poles, Czechs, Scandinavians and Jews and to learn the detestable gibberish of the English swine.

For the present we only demand that our adopted country shall cease the calamitous folly of arming and warmongering, knowing that this will eventually exhaust the generous patience of the Fuehrer and bring his vengeance upon the country.

The warmongers are in the majority, however, and I fear that they will need to be taught a terrible lesson. We have warned them that the Fuehrer will not forgive the cruel inflictions wreaked upon us, in order to prevent the creation of a tolerant understanding between the two nations. We tell them that the Fuehrer always comes to the rescue of his minorities and reminds them of the awful fate which befell those who persecuted the Sudeten people and the German minority in Poland.

BUT THEY are a clumsy and arrogant lot of swine, with no skill in war and ludicrous arms, and they are defying us in a most disgusting way. Their soldiers are laughable, and they have no national unity whatever. And every effort that we make to unify them on the pattern invented by our dear Fuehrer and extend to them the marvelous benefits of national socialism through our little secret organizations is brutally resisted.

They have even put us off the air now, although we only attempted to tell them of the glories of Hitlerism and to turn them from the headlong folly of their warmongering attempt to arouse the Fuehrer's anger. Some of our minority have been dismissed from their jobs for lack of patriotism on the ground that it is necessary to provoke a war with Hitler.

We tell them that it is not necessary for them to become strong, as Hitler will protect America if a reasonable and cooperative attitude is taken. We remind them that he did not harm anyone in Denmark, because Denmark cooperated. We remind them of the fate of Norway, Belgium and the Netherlands, which fell into the power of the warmongers and prepared to attack Hitler.

But they will not listen, and we can only suffer and await the day.

Till again, dear brother.
Heil Hitler!
Your brother, Hermann.

Dr. Horner, Wife Sail for Mission In Belgian Congo

Dr. Howard Horner and his wife, Dr. Marjorie Horner, who were married here in November, 1938, are due to sail today from Seattle to take up medical mission work in the Belgian Congo.

They have spent most of the summer here with Mrs. Horner's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Crittenden, 1715 Lanier place northwest. During the past year they have taken special courses in tropical medicine at Tulane University.

They will travel to Japan, and from there to the Congo, by way of Cape Town. After spending a few months at Bolenge, headquarters of the Disciples of Christ Congo Mission, they will take charge of a hospital at Wema, on the Tchuapa River.

Mrs. Horner, the former Marjorie Crittenden, after taking her bachelor of science and medical degree at George Washington University, served two years at the New England Hospital for Women and Children in Boston and at Butler Hospital, in Providence. Her husband, a graduate of Bethany College and of Yale University Medical School, has had four years' experience in surgery at Kings County Hospital, Brooklyn, and the Boston City Hospital.

FARLEY AND FLYNN
The heir to Mr. Farley's title, and not Harry Hopkins, will be the "real boss at Democratic national headquarters," writes Ernest K. Lindley

Flynn—No Figurehead

By Ernest K. Lindley

Boss Of The Democratic Drive

STORIES are being published to the effect that the real brains and boss of the Democratic national campaign is to be Harry Hopkins, who managed the nomination of Roosevelt and Wallace at Chicago.

These stories, and all others like them, can safely be disregarded. The real boss at Democratic national headquarters will be Edward J. Flynn, who on August 17 will succeed Jim Farley as chairman of the National Committee. Flynn will take orders and suggestions only from the President—and he will not take too many of them even from that eminent source.

I write this with confidence, for two reasons. The first is that as a political writer in New York and Washington I have known Flynn for 15 years, and known him well for about 8 years. He is an urbane man, but underneath he is tough. For 18 years he has been the undisputed Democratic leader of the Bronx, a New York City borough which contains more votes than do many States. Throughout those years the Democrats have rolled up a higher percentage of the total vote in the Bronx than in any of the other four boroughs of the city. Over the same period, while the Democratic Party in other sections of the city has been devastated by exposures of graft and corruption, Flynn and his organization have gone steadily on their way. This is a record which could be established only by a man who both lifted his practical politics to a relatively high level, and ruled his organization with a firm hand.

APART from municipal elections, Flynn has been a rather important man in headquarters during six gubernatorial campaigns and two Presidential campaigns.

Flynn is not the kind to allow any amateur trifling with the business of running campaigns. He did not seek the national chairmanship. He did not want it. But having agreed to accept it, he intends to be the boss at national headquarters.

The second reason for confidence that Flynn will be the real boss, and not a front for somebody else, is that in agreeing to become national chairman he reached a frank understanding with the President. Flynn received two explicit assurances. The first was that Flynn would have a free hand in the organization and direction of the party during the campaign. The second was that the President would send no messages to him through intermediaries.

Flynn bluntly requested those assurances because he had seen at close range the gradual widening of the breach between the President and Jim Farley. He had known both well and been their warm friend for many years. He knew the disrupting effects of the President's growing tendency to manage party affairs through his amateur White House aides. He knew also of the irritations caused by the President's use of these aides to carry suggestions and orders to men with whom the President could, and should, have talked frankly and directly.

THE PRESIDENT'S assurances were put to a test only a few days after Flynn agreed to take the party chairmanship. A trusted friend of both men brought to Flynn, in New York, a minor suggestion from the President concerning the use of a particular individual on the national headquarters staff. Flynn replied, in substance: "You know, as well as I do, that the President oughtn't to do that. He has given me the responsibility. I am not going to tell him what he ought to do or say about any public question. He'll have to let me fulfill in my own way the job he has assigned to me."

The intermediary agreed that Flynn was right. And when he came to Washington a few days later, Flynn reminded the President of his assurances.

Flynn intends to keep Charley Michelson, veteran publicity director of the national committee. He has blasted the plans of the New Deal lieutenants for taking command of national headquarters.

Flynn is on excellent personal terms, however, with Harry Hopkins, Tommy Corcoran and other New Deal aides. Also, he is intellectually and emotionally in more thorough accord with the President's major social objectives than Jim Farley is or ever was. But he knows how the New Dealers get in the hair of the regular Democratic politicians. Probably he will set up a semi-independent organization to mobilize the miscellaneous progressive votes, with Hopkins or Ickes or somebody of their general philosophy at the head.

BUT FLYNN intends to keep firmly under his general direction the campaign that is conducted through the Democratic organizations throughout the country. He has made no decision on this point—and will make none until he has consulted other party leaders—but his natural inclination would be to set up several regional campaign headquarters, each under the direction of one experienced politician who would report directly to Flynn. This is the type of organization with which Flynn is familiar, and which is suited to his character. Although he is a most agreeable person, he is not the hand-shaking salesman type of politician so well exemplified by Jim Farley.

He dislikes detail. He is accustomed to picking good men for specific jobs and holding them responsible.

Whatever the final form of his campaign organization, Flynn will be the top, not the front.

Civil Service On Hatch Act

Enforcing The Law

The text of the Civil Service Commission's statement on enforcement of the Hatch Act follows:

The United States Civil Service Commission desires to make the following statement of general policy concerning the administration of the Hatch Act, approved July 19, 1940, designed to prevent pernicious political activity by officers or employes of State or local agencies whose principal employment is in connection with activities financed in whole or in part by loans or grants made by the United States or by any Federal agency:

1. Those acts which clearly fall within the category of "pernicious political activity" will be prosecuted by the commission. This will mean that there will be at all times a reasonable relationship between the offenses prosecuted by the commission staff, and the only penalty which the commission can impose, namely, that of removal from office, as prescribed by the law itself.

2. The commission will also administer the law in such a manner as to protect fully the civil rights of the employes subject to its provisions. In this connection, the commission will distinguish between participation in the discussions of issues of broad social, economic or general public character on the one hand and partisan political issues on the other hand. The commission believes that the primary objective of the legislation is to prevent partisan political activity in connection with the conduct and management of political campaigns. The commission's administration of the law will conform to that objective.

It is important that notice be taken as to the extent of the jurisdiction of the Civil Service Commission under the terms of the law. There are many provisions of the law, the violations of which constitute criminal offenses. Such violations will of course be handled by the Department of Justice. The jurisdiction of the commission applies to Section 9 of the law of August 2, 1939, and Section 12 of the law of July 19, 1940.

Section 9 of the law of August 2, 1939, makes it unlawful for any person employed in the executive branch of the Federal Government, or any agency or department thereof, to use his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with an election or affecting the result thereof and forbids officers or employes in the executive branch of the Federal Government, or in any agency or department thereof from taking any active part in political management or political campaigns.

Section 12 of the law of July 19, 1940, provides as follows:

"No officer or employe of any State or local agency whose principal employment is in connection with any activity which is financed in whole or in part by loans or grants made by the United States or by any Federal agency shall (1) use his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with an election or a nomination for office, or affecting the result thereof, or (2) directly or indirectly coerce, attempt to coerce, command, or advise any other such officer or employe to pay, lend, or contribute any part of his salary or compensation or anything else of value to any party, committee, organization, agency, or person for political purposes. No such officer or employe shall take any active part in political management or in political campaigns."

The Civil Service Commission is charged by the terms of the law with enforcement as to employes of State and local agencies, covered by Section 12 above. Enforcement as to Federal employes in the competitive classified service is vested in the commission by application of the basic Civil Service Act and rules. Responsibility for enforcement as to Federal employes in the noncompetitive, or nonclassified service, rests with the head of the executive department or other executive agency in which the person concerned is employed.

The law, as passed by Congress, provides for the adoption by the Civil Service Commission of such reasonable procedures and rules and regulations as it considers necessary to execute its prescribed functions. Such regulations and rules of procedure are being prepared and will be issued by the commission within a short period of time.

The commission, in receiving information of alleged violations of the political activity law, will expect reports to be specific as to offenses, dates, names, places and other matters essential to form a proper basis for investigation. The procedure to be established will provide for an orderly and systematic handling of all matters of real substance and will insure due process of law to any persons charged with violations.

Seven Weeks

By Barnet Nover

SEVEN WEEKS have gone by since the French laid down their arms, but the Nazi invasion of England which the British expected would immediately follow the cessation of fighting on the continent has not yet occurred.

Certainly there were very real advantages to be gained by moving against Great Britain with the same breath-taking speed, the same overwhelming force as had laid low the Netherlands, Belgium and France in little more than a month. Another month, it was freely predicted, would see Hitler in London.

Seven weeks ago the British were obviously not as well prepared for an invasion as they seem to be today. The British army had lost a very considerable part of its equipment during the epochal retreat from Flanders. It had to be reorganized, reequipped, strengthened. The British navy, bereft of the support of the French fleet, had suddenly to make new dispositions of its units and overhaul its entire strategy.

British industry was then still operating at relatively low gear. It had to be speeded up. Coastal defenses had to be considerably expanded. Provisions had to be made against parachutists and the possibility of an invading army being landed by transport planes. New and drastic measures had to be taken against British Fifth Column elements of the kind which had played a decisive role in the collapse of France.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE through the fog of censorship to know with any degree of accuracy how much progress the British have made in preparations against an invasion. The weight of evidence suggests that it has been impressive and every returning traveler speaks eloquently of the superb confidence of the British people.

Some argued last June that 100,000 to 200,000 men landed in England by ships and planes would be enough to force the British to their knees. It would probably take many more men to do the job now.

That an invasion of England, even after this prolonged delay, has become an impossible task is, however, a decidedly dangerous assumption. If these seven weeks have given Great Britain a chance to improve her preparations for defense, they have also provided Hitler with time to organize the attack. And the very circumstance that an assault on England would be costly has made it all the more necessary for him to make his plans watertight. Hitler cannot afford more than one major defeat. An invasion that did not quite come off could conceivably mean his ruin. Without adequate sea power, there would be no Dunquerke for the German armies that had managed to get to England.

BECAUSE of this circumstance it it not at all unlikely that Hitler has weighed carefully the possibility of an alternative to invasion. There is such a possibility. That is to weaken the British by a succession of large-scale air attacks on British docks, harbor works, factories, munition dumps, oil tanks and shipping, while, at the same time, pursuing what Edmond Taylor has called the strategy of a terror, that is waging a war of nerves on the British so as to soften them up psychologically.

Air attacks on Great Britain have occurred almost daily during the last two months. How much damage they have done is unknown. It may have been considerable. But there is no evidence that it has thus far resulted in any weakening of British morale, in cutting off the islands from contact with the overseas world from which the British people get a very considerable portion of their essential supplies, or in forcing them to fight a purely defensive war. The German air raids on Britain have been matched by British air raids on a great many points in Germany.

During the past week Germany's aerial assault on Britain reached a new high level of intensity. More German planes have participated in these raids than ever before. But the British insist that last Thursday's raid was a German failure and that the same holds true of yesterday's air raids by the Nazis.

In any event, it is problematical whether Great Britain can be defeated by a continuous air offensive alone, coupled though it is with a counter-blockade carried out by planes and surface craft. Such a strategy could only succeed if continued over a period of many months. Yet it is doubtful if Hitler can wait many months for his final triumph.

IT IS TRUE that he now has all of continental Europe at his disposal. He is in a position to exploit to Germany's advantage all the considerable physical and human resources of that area. But the continent he rules is full of sullen people who hate their conquerors.

Millions of them will not willingly or permanently accept the role of hewers of wood and drawers of water he has assigned to them. And if the war is prolonged into the winter he will have a host of starving as well as rebellious subjects on his hands.

Besides, there are two other factors that make a policy of attrition dangerously inadequate. The first is that as American production gradually increases, the disparity in air power between Great Britain and Germany may be reduced and ultimately may disappear altogether. The war of attrition could then prove decidedly disadvantageous to the Third Reich.

The second factor is Italy, which is in no position to stand the stresses and strains of a long war.

The very logic of the situation plus the eternal restlessness of the Nazi regime may compel Hitler to move before very long. It is indeed possible that the Italian offensive in East Africa will prove to be the prelude to an attack on England as the invasion of Norway served as the prelude to the assault on the Low Countries. The fact that Hitler has allowed seven weeks to go by without carrying out his threat to invade England does not mean that this threat has now permanently been shelved.

Mrs. McLean Plans An Informal Dinner

Glen Abey to Entertain at Cocktails Wednesday For Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin; Bennett Cranes Give Party at Home in Mount Victoria

Although the vacation schedule continues to thin Washington society ranks, informal parties still go on. Most of them are small, dinners of 8, 10 or 12, while the cocktail hour never finds more than two dozen gathered together.

Mrs. Edward Beale McLean has sent out telegrams asking a few people to dine informally with her on Wednesday evening at Friendship. The telegram is Mrs. McLean's favorite invitation method.

Glen Abbey will entertain a handful of friends at cocktails on Wednesday afternoon in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin, of the State Department. Mr. Chapin's tour of duty here is up, but he has not yet been notified where he will be sent. Mrs. Chapin has been in Long Island off and on with her children throughout the hot weather.

Cranes Entertain At Mount Victoria

The first big party in weeks was that given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Crane at their home at Mount Victoria, Md. Guests of honor were the former Attorney General, Homer S. Cummings, and Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley. The Stanleys have a place in Maryland and have known the Cranes for many years. The host, like Mr. Stanley, was at one time in the Department of Justice.

Despite intermittent showers earlier in the day, yesterday's party was held outdoors. A mint julep bar was set up in one coner of the garden, and guests sat at small tables placed here and there on the grass. The hostess wore a long dress of flowered chiffon and Mrs. Stanley had chosen a summer print.

About 150 friends from Washington, Maryland and Virginia were present. Those invited from the Capital included Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint.

Marionette Show To Benefit Church

A large crowd is expected to attend the buffet supper and marionette show to be held Thursday for the benefit of St. John's Church in McLean, Va. "Maid's night out" was chosen especially as the day of the party, which will take place on the lawn of the home of the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold.

At the benefit, fresh vegetables will be sold in a "country store," which will be in the form of a log cabin. In the back of the Arnold place is a natural theater, where the marionette shows will be given every half hour during the afternoon and evening. Supper, too, will be served at all hours.

Long tables, taken from the quaint old church, will be set up for a special children's supper, and pony rides will be provided for the youngsters' amusement.

Among those sponsoring the affair are Mrs. Arnold, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. Donald Downs, Mrs. A. Smith Bowman, Mrs. Beverly Coleman, Mrs. Richard Shands, Mrs. A. A. Snyder, Mrs. John Rixey Smith, Mrs. Adrian Busic, Dr. Louise Taylor Jones, Mrs. John Mackall, Mrs. John M. Hudgins, Mrs. Ralph Segar, Mrs. Patrick Ffoulkes, Miss Sallie Ball, Mrs. Charles P. Howze, Mrs. Edmund H. Parry, jr., and Mrs. Richard Smith.

Navy Nuptials Planned

Announcement is made of the engagement and approaching marriage of Mrs. Lowry B. Stephenson, of the Wardman Park, and Lieut. Comdr. Charles Clifford Windsor, U. S. N., retired. The couple will be married on Wednesday in the chapel of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, with a small reception to follow at Mrs. Stephenson's apartment here.

The prospective bride is the widow of Lieut. Col. Lowry B. Stephenson, U. S. Marine Corps, and was the former Miss Evelyn Chew, of Philadelphia, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David S. B. Chew, of that city. She is a niece of Mrs. Oswald Chew and Mrs. Benjamin Chew, of Radnor, Pa., and of Miss Elizabeth Chew, of Cliveden, Germantown, Pa. She is the mother of Lowry Chew Stephenson, of Philadelphia, and of David Chew Stephenson, of Washington.

Commander Windsor is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Windsor, of Iron River, Mich., and of New Brunswick. He is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, class of 1907, and is a member of the Army and Navy Club. At present he is living at the Wardman Park.

Miss Jones to Wed Upton H. Richards

Mrs. Charles Samuel Jones, of Culpeper, Va., and Washington, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Nancy Jeffries Jones, to Upton Hill Richards, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Donald Richards, of Warrenton, Va.

Miss Jones was graduated from Sullins College in Bristol, Va., and later studied in Washington. Mr. Richards attended the University of Virginia, Randolph Macon College and Washington and Lee Law School. He is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity and at present is with the Department of Justice.

The wedding will take place late in the summer.

Mrs. Edward Reed At Saranac Inn

Mrs. Edward Recd, of Washington, who recently visited Mrs. C. Mathews Dick in Newport, has gone to Saranac Inn in the Adirondacks to spend the rest of the summer with her mother, Mrs. Jane Story. Mr. Reed is Counselor of the American Embassy in Rome.

MISS ANNE KERR RUSSELL, of Winchester, whose engagement to Flowrnoy Leonard Largent, jr., of that place, was announced recently, has selected Saturday, August 24, as the date of her wedding. The ceremony will take place at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Russell, at 8 that evening.

The bride-to-be is one of three charming sisters, the other two being Mrs. John Barnes Carr, of Clarksdale, Miss., the former Miss Mary Greenway Russell, and Miss Virginia Cover Russell. She attended the Handley School in Winchester and Holton-Arms. Tall and slender, with the unusual combination of blonde hair and brown eyes, Miss Russell is a leader in the younger set. This past year she has taught underprivileged children in kindergarten and done much other social service work.

MR. LARGENT, who is known to his friends as Jim, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Largent, of Winchester. ALDIE, VA., has been very gay this past week, as Army officers, men and trucks rolled in to make one-night stands. Troops of the Virginia National Guard took over the place from Monday until yesterday, pitching tents on the high school grounds, some sleeping on cots or blankets in the two large school buildings.

A. di Zerega and Philip di Zerega, the latter officials of the Loudoun County schools, were on hand to welcome the troops and officers, who expressed appreciation at the treatment they were shown.

ON FRIDAY the 111th Field Artillery National Guard, in command of Gen. E. Slaughter Montague, of Hampton, Va., arrived about midday with between seven and eight hundred officers and men. Of the 50 to 60 officers about 35 of them were former V. M. I. men and had friends in this neighborhood. They gave a band concert that afternoon and later made merry at the Mercer Tavern, the Red Fo Tavern and the New York Cafe in Middleburg.

THEY WERE ALL a part of the Twenty-ninth Division, made up of Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania troops en route to Watkins Glen, N. Y., and on to Army maneuvers at Plattsburg. Among those seen at Aldie were Lieut. Col. Arthur Emmerson and Maj. Frank Pace, of Norfolk; Maj. Edgar Demuth, of Richmond; Capt. J. C. Anthony, Capt. Cantwell Brown, of Richmond. Other officers included John J. Curley, Mac Raffo, Jack Epps, Samuel Scott, Lawrence Page, Lewis Chadwick, Clinton Thurston and Charles Verell, all of Richmond.

Mrs. Arthur Pack Here for First Visit In Nine Years

Back home for her first real visit here in nine years is Mrs. Arthur Pack, daughter of Mrs. George Thorpe, of Washington, and wife of a British diplomat.

Mrs. Pack has just arrived from Chile, where her husband is stationed. She reports that South American women are as active in war relief work as are those of this country. Mrs. Pack also says the German Fifth Column in Chile is large, but that the government has the names of the leading members.

The Packs did service in Spain during the Spanish civil war and were later sent to Warsaw. They had left for Chile, however, before Poland was invaded.

Mrs. Pack tells friends here that the United States Ambassador to Chile, Claude Bowers, is extremely popular. Between his many duties he sowehow finds time to continue his writing and is just now completing a biography of Washington Irving the famous Hudson River writer, who later served as a diplomat in Spain. Mr. Bowers was Ambassador there before going to Chile.

Mrs. Pack expects to be in Washington two or three months. Her husband's family is in England, but so far, she says, they are safe from the war.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

MR. AND MRS. Turner Catledge asked friends in for cocktails the other afternoon at the cottage which they share in Rehoboth with the Stanley Richardsons. The host, who is taking a vacation after attending both the Republican and Democratic national conventions, was in fine form, being nicely suntanned and having streamlined himself by the determined loss of a number of pounds. Turner was wearing tasteful gray flannel slacks topped by a silk shirt of brilliant blue patterned in swimmers, surfboards and palm trees.

When Mr. Catledge was asked if the shirt was a present from his wife, he replied, "No, I bought it myself. I feel like that."

PRETTY MRS. Stanley Richardson, looking as innocent as grade A milk, amused the guests by showing candid camera snapshots which she had taken of them on the beach. Some of the poses were highly unpremeditated, especially one which showed a lady much given to sun bathing sprawled on her face like a starfish.

The sprawling lady, who has the evenest tan on the beach, says that she really works at it and gave her formula for suntan as follows—of course it's understood that one must have the kind of skin that will tan. The whole trick is to lie flat in the sun always, never sit or stand while browning. Time yourself, the same number of minutes lying on your back and on your face. Begin with five minutes and gradually increase the time to not more 15 or 20 minutes and always keep your head covered. It works if one has enough patience.

ONE OF THE Catledge's guests, Mrs. Frederick Kaufmann, moved to Washington to live just two weeks before taking off for summer in Rehoboth. Commander Kaufmann will be on duty at the Navy Department, and the whole family is looking forward to next winter in Washington. Mrs. Kaufman has blue eyes and curly hair, and, with her wit and vivacious manner, is sure to be popular in the Capital.

Other Washingtonians who dropped by the Catledge's during the afternoon were Commander and Mrs. William Manning, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Oliver, Walter Chamblin, just back from a successful fishing trip, and Judge and Mrs. Edgar Goodrich.

THE BERMUDA INCIDENT when the ladies curtsied to the Duke of Windsor and merely bowed to the Duchess reminds one of a curtsying incident which took place at the recent Havana conference—and I promise not to mention that conference again.

A friend and henchman of Col. Fulgencio Batista, the Cuban President-elect, invited some Americans to a very informal cocktail party in the great man's honor. Among the "gringos" was Mrs. Malcolm Logan, of New Orleans, a niece of Senator John Bankhead and of Speaker William Bankhead.

Col. Batista was late in arriving at the party and when he finally did sweep in the guests were taken a bit by surprise, most of them having forgotten that he was the reason for the celebration. But not so Mrs. Logan.

Most of the Americans greeted the colonel informally when their turn came at being presented. Some of them reminded him that they had met him on his historic trip to Washington. But again, not so Mrs. Logan.

When her turn to be presented, this charming lady, to the utter surprise of everyone, including Col. Batista, flung a deep curtsy and a pretty one. The effect was only slightly marred by the fact that she was wearing—remember it was in the tropics and the occasion was very informal—a blue gingham tennis dress, no stockings and a red bandana tied 'round her head.

Jean Paul-Boncour, of the French Embassy, left Washington by automobile on Friday bound for San Francisco and thence for Shanghai. He intends to make a leisurely crossing of the United States and see as much of the country as he can. He was very sorry to leave the Capital after such a brief sojourn and hopes that the call of duty will one day return him to Washington.

Miss Sheridan Becomes Bride

News has been received here of the wedding in Santa Barbara, Calif., on Saturday of Miss Carlina Sheridan, formerly of Washington, to Capt. William Jefferson Glasgow, jr., U. S. A.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, of Santa Barbara, and is a granddaughter of Gen. Phil Sheridan, of Civil War fame. Capt. Glasgow is on the faculty of the United States Military Academy at West Point, where the couple will live.

Their wedding took place in the afternoon in the chapel of Mission Santa Inez, near the Danish village of Solvang. The Rev. Augustine Hobrecht, president of St. Anthony's College at Santa Barbara, officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, Mr. Perkins. Her matron of honor and only attendant was Mrs. Phillip Dunne, of Beverly Hills, Calif. Capt. Glasgow's brother, Maj. Joseph Glasgow, of Fresno, was best man, and the ushers were Philip Henry Sheridan, brother of the bride, Deane Rucker, of Detroit, her cousin, and Emmett Edwards, of Washington.

After the wedding the entire company motored through the Santaynez Valley to Alisal Ranch, the country estate of Mr. and Mrs. Perkins, for a wedding supper.

Mrs. Glasgow made her home in Washington for several years.

N., secretary of the Navy War College, and Mrs. Maddox will present their daughter, Miss Muriel Maddox, on Friday at a dance, and the following night Count and Countess Alfonso P. Villa will give a large dance at Fairholme, their summer place, to mark the debut of their third daughter, Miss Francesca Villa.

Purdon-Benjamin Troth Announced

The engagement of Miss Mary Benjamin, daughter of Mrs. William Massena Benjamin, of New York City and Garrison, N. Y., and the late Mr. Benjamin, to Eric Sinclaire Purdon, has been announced by her mother.

Miss Benjamin, who was introduced to society in 1935, is a granddaughter of Mrs. Edward Prime, of New York. Her father who died in 1929, was the son of Col. and Mrs. Samuel Nicoll Benjamin and grandson of Hamilton Fish, Governor of New York in 1848 and Secretary of State under President Grant.

Mr. Purdon is the son of Mrs. Eric St. Claire Purdon, of Washington, and the late Mr. Purdon, and a grandson of Col. George H. Morgan, U. S. A., (retired), and of Edward S. Purdon, of Belfast, Ireland. He attended schools in England and Ireland and was graduated from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. He is now on the editorial staff of Farrar and Rinehart, publishers.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Although Interested in People's Problems, Woman Dislikes Having to Wade Through Heavy Analyses

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your daily column is always very interesting to me, until you begin writing in the manner of your reply of August 8 to "Heartbroken." If you speak as you write, you must have a difficult time making yourself understand. I've done some reading here and there, but I've never come across sentences with so many large and unnecessary words as one finds in your column.

You must think that an advice-to-the-lovelorn column is quite a lowly assignment, and that unusual, superfluous words will lift it out of that class. To me it seems rather ridiculous to answer a simple, childish letter such as "Heartbroken" writes, in the overly literate manner you've used. Do you suppose she has understood you?

People who read your column read it for diversion, curiosity and advice. And who can relax while trying to untangle sentences? None who must seek your advice could possibly isolate your essential answer from the maze of your remarks. Excuse me for expressing the opinion of many of The Post's readers. There is always someone who has to "belittle." I hope you take this in the spirit in which it is intended. After all, you have been handing out advice for so long that you should be able to take it. T. M.

Reader Must Meet Writer Half Way

DEAR T. M.: The manner in which I express myself in writing does, as you say, come under occasional criticism, and for this I am sorry—since my purpose at all times is to say what I have to say with all the clarity and force of which I am capable. Indeed, I have sometimes thought that the very conscientiousness of my efforts in this direction is at least partly accountable for my fault of rhetorical emphasis.

But there are also other possible contributing factors, which I shall suggest—since you are sufficiently interested to invite a discussion of the subject. Firstly: As all writing persons know, "hard writing makes easy reading." Writing, they say amongst themselves, isn't writing, but rewriting.

Those writers who respect the intelligence of their readers hold that few, if any, manuscripts are fit for publication unless and until they have been carefully revised as many as three to half a dozen or more times. Rewriting is a pruning process, calculated to strip the presentation to stark simplicity; and the deliberate reconsideration involved often results, as well, in a change and improvement of the basic outlines of the initial message.

Secondly: In the newspaper profession, however, where one writing daily against a deadline, there is all too little time in which to fashion the precise phrase. Author and audience must reconcile themselves to what amount to the "crude product" of what might have been a better chiseled, more easily digestible output, if the element of time could have played a larger part in the composition.

Thirdly: The more ground the writer tries to cover, or the more information to convey, in limited time and space, the more he handicaps himself in the matter of achieving that simplicity of utterance so devoutly desired by all. I, for instance, could make my assignment much easier on myself, and upon the mentalities of purely diversion-seeking readers, if I were content to treat a subject superficially or indifferently, in the sense of confining my remarks to the obvious, in words of one syllable.

But, even while writing always on emergency basis, I try to provide the individual correspondent with at least a rough rationale of his predicament, so that he may, thereafter, find the happy solution more or less on his own power. In some cases, this means biting off a lot of subject matter to chew. But even so, and however awkwardly presented, I think it constitutes a worthier brand of attempted aid than simply leading him by the nose through certain paces.

Fourthly: It is my real respect for the intelligence of both my correspondents and readers which leads me to think that the majority, at least, are easily capable (if they so desire) of "isolating my essential answers from the maze of my remarks." Also, I have a theory that no education of any kind can be achieved without some intellectual (and even physical) effort. And I have always regarded this column as a newspaper medium of popular education in the philosophy and techniques of orderly and harmonious—or civilized—human relationships. I feel it has little in common with the now virtually obsolete, so-called "advice-to-the-lovelorn" feature.

In process of trying to grow up to the requirements of this journalistic assignment, I have found it necessary to make a pretty consistent, hard-working effort to learn what the specialists in various fields of human relations are uncovering, in the way of increased understanding of the causes and cures of social maladjustments. And whether in reading books or in consulting these specialists, I discovered that I must be mentally on the alert; that I must be interrogative, debative and reflective; that I must return time and again to the initial source of information for clarification of various points, if I am to be at all sure that I have got the gist of the lesson.

I learned, in brief, that there is no easy short cut to what I wanted and needed to know, for my own benefit as well as for the sake of those who honor me with the supposition that I can be of some help to them in analyzing and correcting their difficulties. I conclude, therefore, that what the specialists, in their ampler medium of instruction, cannot do for me without my diligent cooperation—that this column cannot hope to do for altogether lazy-minded readers.

As it is, I believe that I have a fair success in translating into layman's language, and in synopsis form, certain beliefs and findings which came to me in much more formidable phraseology and tiresome length. And I think I am warranted in expecting the newspaper reader to meet me at least half-way in this project of trying to pass along the line much useful information that simply cannot be intelligibly reduced to capsule form.

In conclusion, in support of my belief that most of my readers do "get my meaning," in spite of the alleged rhetorical interference, I submit that I have had several letters of appreciation of the very article which displeases you.

One says, in part: "I would like you to know how very much your answer of August 9 to the young girl has helped me. In particular, the paragraph which begins, 'But the point to remember is that IF the relationship ever contained, etc. . . .'"

But I do sincerely thank you, M. T., for your friendly criticism—since it reminded me to say what I had long had in mind to say in defense of, and apology for, my particular style of column writing—a style which the nature of the subject matter has dictated. For the truth of the matter is that, during my years as a reporter and feature writer, I wrote quite differently, for the reason that the subject matter in such instances readily lent itself to that simpler attack which you prefer. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Political Faux Pas

I

"Isn't it wonderful about the showing Willkie made in the Gallup poll?"

"We-l-l, yes . . . I suppose from a Republican standpoint—"

"Aren't you a Republican?"

"No, indeed!"

"Oh-h-h, I'm so sorry! I—I didn't know that. Why I always supposed you were a Republican. You don't look at ALL like—like—"

"A Democrat?"

"Well no, that's not exactly what I mean. What I'm trying to say is that there's nothing ordinary—"

"ORDINARY!"

"No, that isn't the word either. What I mean is you've always gone around with such nice people and just seemed so sound and everything that I simply never suspected—"

"The worst?"

"No, no! I don't mean that! Anyway after all, Willkie's very close to the REAL Democrats. I mean the honest to goodness Jeffersonian Democrats—"

"Those old fossils!"

"Oh-h you . . . you don't mean you're a New Dealer!"

"I certainly am!"

"Well. . . . well . . . . of course . . . well what I mean is . . . well, as a matter of fact I haven't anything at all against New Dealers individually. After all, this is a free country. And besides, I know a few New Dealers who are very lovely people!"

II

"Say, it looks as if President Roosevelt had put a smart one over on the Republicans, doesn't it?"

"We-l-l, I suppose . . . from the standpoint of a Democrat—"

"Aren't you a Democrat?"

"Heavens no!"

"Oh-h! Of all things! Why I never dreamed you weren't a Democrat! Why you don't look a bit like a Republican!"

"What do you mean?"

"Oh-h, well you're not a bit stuffy or anything."

"STUFFY!"

"No, no, that isn't what I mean! What I'm trying to say is, you—you just always seemed so bright—"

"SEEMED so bright!"

"No, no that isn't it either. What I really mean is you just always seemed like one of us—that is, so broad and everything—"

"So that's what you think of Republicans!"

"Oh no—no! That isn't it either! Why I know quite a number of Republicans who are reasonably—that is, QUITE keen . . . and anyway, of course I do think the Republican Party is getting a lot more advanced—"

"Thank you!"

"No, now please don't misunderstand me. What I mean is I have nothing at all against Republicans individually. After all, we're all Americans. And—as a matter of fact, two or three of my very closest friends are Republicans!"

Museum of Art To Aid Designers

With dark omens hovering over the Paris designing field, New York is now being called upon to take up the torch of fashion leadership for the entire world. To this end the first concerted movement has been started, to use the Museum of Costume Art as a storehouse of source material.

Situated in the International Building of Rockefeller Center, the museum is heralded as a fountain of inspiration for present-day fashion design. Long before the present French situation, the museum had been working successfully with retail stores, motion picture designers, and some of the more far-sighted creators in the fashion industry. Now it is expected that the museum will prove more than ever of value in planning new lines for fall.

Sponsored by a committee of seven leading American women in fashion, who will coordinate, stimulate, and in every way encourage the use of the museum by manufacturers and designers, the movement is spreading to all branches of the fashion industry.

Woman Changed Foreign Policy Plank At Convention Despite Loss of Voice

A SEVERE ATTACK of bronchitis is no handicap to an embattled woman Democrat, as Mrs. Arthur Condon proved at the Chicago Convention. She caught cold en route to the convention and was ill during her entire stay. Her only regret is that she might have accomplished a lot more as sole woman delegate from the District, if she hadn't lost her voice.

MRS. CONDON

Even without her voice, Mrs. Condon, former president of the Democratic Women's National Council, managed to change the foreign policy plank of the platform. "The resolutions committee, of which I was a member, had railroaded through a resolution against sending our armed forces into any foreign lands outside the Americas," she explained on her return to Washington. "I got to thinking and decided Hitler would consider that an invitation to march right into Martinique, Iceland or Greenland.

"I was sick, but I was mad, too. I couldn't speak above a whisper, so I persuaded the man next to me to reopen the question. With other people talking for me, I finally managed to add to the resolution 'except in case of attack.' I still don't think that's strong enough, and if I'd had my voice I would have put up more of a fight. Even so, Senator Byrnes told me it took him an hour to talk Senator Wheeler into accepting that change."

If you're trying without success to train your pup to sleep outdoors at night, Mrs. Robert D. Haywood, of Colonial Village, who is summering on the Severn River near Annapolis has a suggestion. Faced with the same problem, she decided that Kelly, their young Irish setter, cried all night because he was lonesome in his doghouse. Now she lets him take an old doll, discarded by her daughter, to bed with him. He cuddles up to it companionably and drops off to sleep without a whimper.

A cosmetics importer was haled into court recently by the Food and Drug Administration, which proved that 40,000 of his lipsticks contained harmful minerals. He was willing to part with the lipsticks, but in order to have something to show for the deal he asked the court to let him salvage the 40,000 containers. This he did, sending the contents back to the foreign manufacturer in one huge gooey lump of lipstick.

Housewives and taxi drivers alike were startled the other day when their favorite sports announcer let loose with one of those words the Federal Communications Commission considers naughty. The announcer realized his mistake at once, say his colleagues. So he turned to the blank wall and said severely to himself, "Listen, buddy, if you're going to use language like that, you'll have to get out." The ruse apparently worked, for he hasn't had a kick from the FCC as yet.

Book Dispels Alcohol Superstitions

Effect on Weight Of Imbibing Called 'Indirect'

Tips Given on How To Have Your Lqiuor And Keep Your Head

By Ida Jean Kain

MEN don't understand alcohol any bettter than they understand women . . . but many a man considers himself an authority on both subjects. This article may help to straighten you out on alcohol. It probably has a few surprises in it!

Alcohol does not increase your blood pressure, make you fat, warm you up, give you cirrhosis of the liver—or even a strong breath! We learn from a perusal of "Alcohol, the Servant of Man," that the way to catch your blood pressure reassuringly low is to have it checked the morning after. Although there is a temporary increase when you take a drink it's because alcohol acts as a depressant to the inhibitory nerve centers controlling the heart beat and your heart beats faster and the blood pressure is raised. But the final result is dilation of the capillaries, which lowers the blood pressure instead of raising it.

If you don't have cirrhosis of the liver to start with, research shows that alcohol won't give it to you. Pure alcohol cannot be detected on the breath—the "whiff" is produced by the accompanying substances!

It Doesn't Warm

Strangely enough, a drink doesn't even warm you up. It causes a temporary sensation of warmth because it sends the blood into the skin, but heat is thrown off more rapidly than normal and the final effect is that it makes you colder!

Now, about alcohol and your weight . . Alcohol is fast energy and it must be used up. It cannot be stored. Therefore, it cannot make you fat. But here's the catch: It spares the food calories—and they are converted into fat. The man who drinks and eats inevitably gains weight. But the man who doesn't eat feels his drinks more—and if he does it consistently, is in a fair way to developing polyneuritis. This is a vitamin deficiency disease and most hard drinkers have to think about it. Of course, it is really caused by not eating the right foods, rather than by drinking and teetotalers can get it, too!

The authors of this fascinating book are Walton Hall Smith, a chemist, and Ferdinand C. Helwig, an M. D. Their style is 100 proof entertainment and they give the facts without taking the pleasure out of your Scotch and soda.

If you are a business drinker, you will like their tips for keeping up with your associates and keeping your head. The trick, we're told, is to slow up the process of absorption. This can be done by dilution and by food. Dilution is the surest. Well diluted drinks do not hit you as fast or as hard That means taking water with or immediately after the drink—not before!

Tips on Drinking

Some foods are better buffers than others. The champions are whole milk, cream and butter and they can be taken as long as an hour before drink and still act as deterrents to absorption.

Spacing well diluted drinks properly and calling it a night in time to get eight hours' sleep are the best preventives of a hang-over.

But if you are going to have a hang-over, you have it the night before—even though you are not aware of it. And that is the time to start working on it. Before going to bed take food, preferably milk, so that it can overtake some of your drinks. You need food, and, as the authors remind you, there may be some trouble about it the next morning.

When you get up, take a sedative—not an eye-opener—to ease the pain. And eye-opener merely postpones the reckoning. The hang-over is caused by the accumulation of lactic acid which has been induced by alcohol and rest and time are the only cures.

Playing Cards Have Long Lineage

Neither cards nor folding card tables are as contemporary as they seem. Playing cards are among civilization's oldest relics, having been used for amusement in ancient Egypt, China and India. The folding card table didn't turn up in Europe till the seventeenth century, but then and through the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, it was made in many beautiful styles distinguished by marquetry, carving, graceful cabriole legs, most of them made to fold. The plain-jane rickety model we use mostly today is modern and we should blush for it, decoratively.

Ready for Hike Into Mountains

THE Rev. Randolph L. Gregory, pastor of Temple Baptist Church, accommodated his shoulders to the not unsizable spread of a big, heavy pack yesterday and regarded his feet the while.

He will set out at 6 a. m. today for a 150-mile hike through the Virginia mountains. Accompanying him will be ten boys, members of the Temple Church Center, at Tenth and N streets northwest.

THE pastor and the boys have been in training for some time. They have hiked through Rock Creek Park, principally. And they reflected yesterday that those wilds in the heart of Washington afford some fair hills for practice.

But ahead of them lie Old Rag and Stony Man Mountains, no knolls. And they will be carrying on their shoulders pup tents, and clothing and supplies, including food, for two weeks.

THEY will travel by automobiles to Leesburg, Va., today, then turn west along the Appalachian Trail. Then they will make for the Shenandoah National Park; walk, by way of a side trip, to the Luray Caverns; turn back into the Shenandoah Park and then strike south to the Government's Rapidan camp.

It is after all this that they will start climbing Old Rag and Stony Man Mountains.

Red Cross to Mobilize Blood Donors for Britain

1. The Red Cross will inaugurate in New York today a project to collect blood from volunteer donors for conversion into plasma for shipment to England to treat war wounded. To illustrate a method of obtaining plasma, facilities of Gallinger Hospital were used. Here, Dr. John Stotler inserts a needle into a vein of a donor and Nurse Alice Ball holds a vacuum bottle into which the blood will flow. After . . .

2. . . . the blood has stood in refrigeration awhile the plasma starts to rise to the top like cream in a milk bottle. Medical Technologist Mary Sproul examines the blood. Blood cells have settled to the bottom, forming a dark red sediment. This is not a complete separation, so . . .

3. . . . Miss Sproul must centrifuge the blood. She brings to exact weight two centrifuge bottles in metal containers that will be whirled about at a rapid rate, the centrifugal force completing the separation. The plasma then is drawn off and stored in bottles for . . .

4. . . . use as in this operation. The bottle of plasma hangs from a stand, and flows through a tube to the needle, where Dr. J. J. Weinstein (lower right) can inject the plasma in the patient's vein while the operation proceeds.

LABORATORY—The picture at left and the one below were made at Watertown (Mass.) Arsenal, which does not produce guns on a mass basis because it is in reality a laboratory. It builds 8-inch, 16-inch, 90-mm., 37-mm. and other size guns. After one or two of these guns have been constructed and blue prints perfected they are turned over to industrial plants which produce the armaments for the Government. The 8-inch war club below is for coastal defense. The base is one of permanent position but the gun can be turned in a complete circle. A new baby in the defense family is the 90-mm. antiaircraft gun shown at left in firing position at the arsenal. It is the only one of its kind now but there will be more under the defense program

The Co-Op Plan for Flying

By George Thorpe

A GROUP of Federal employes with economic ingenuity and a zest for aviation have overcome their office schedules and modest incomes to take to the air on a wholesale basis.

Eighteen men and women who have nursed aspirations to become aviators banded together a month ago to form the Federal Flying Club.

Chipping in equally they bought a Lunscombe monoplane, and arranged for a CAA-approved instructor to teach them to fly at Greenbelt Airport on a pay-as-you-go-basis.

ON Saturday afternoons or whenever they are no longer needed to keep the machinery running for Uncle Sam, the members head for the airport and another hour or two in the air.

Because they have worked out their expenses, including cost of their airplane, gasoline, and flying lessons, on a cooperative basis, they are learning to fly at about a third of the usual cost.

First to solo among the white-collar sportsmen and sportswomen was Miss Katie Crouch, of Brentwood, Md., who is employed at the Department of Agriculture. Miss Crouch now has amassed 40 hours flying time and recently took the Lunscombe on a round-trip hop to New York.

ANOTHER prospective pilot from the distaff side is Miss Dorothy Waterloo, of 1724 Seventeenth street northwest, the secretary of the club and an employe of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. Miss Waterloo's administrative duties have not interferred with her flight training. She expects to solo soon.

The club has unlimited possibilities, according to President R. Paul Weesner, 29, of Silver Spring, Md., a lawyer in the Department of Interior.

Weesner points out that when all the members have learned to fly they will be able to use the monoplane on their vacations, and that should war come they will be able to step out of their desk jobs directly into Uncle Sam's national defenses.

OTHER officers of the club include Orval J. Baldwin, of 3522 Quebec street northwest, vice president; Joseph J. Lobsach, of 630 Emerson street northwest, treasurer, and Paul A. de Tamble, of Arlington, Va., director.

Duke Proves Ferdinand-Like Bull in Break From His Pen

Morton Gibson and Duke

Duke, the Bull, caused a lot of excitement in the vicinity of Western avenue and Barnaby street northwest yesterday when he escaped from his pen to explore the neighborhood—but he turned out to be as sweet-tempered as Ferdinand.

So shy was Duke, a 2½-year-old Guernsey, that it took him two days to muster enough courage for the 20-minute expedition which ended when police and neighbors helped to lead him reluctantly back to his pen.

His owners, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander H. Ruhl, of 6701 Western avenue northwest, blamed it all on District workmen who have been installing sewers next to their property and, according to the Ruhls, broke down a part of the fence around Duke's enclosure by piling dirt against it.

The fence was broken down early Saturday. The Ruhls thought they could wait for it to be repaired when workmen returned today, never dreaming that Duke would get the wanderlust.

Yesterday Duke pulled the surprise. Neighbors called police, who found him strolling leisurely along Barnaby street, unmindful of the excitement he was causing. In one yard, as Duke passed by, was a baby in a carriage.

"He's harmless as Ferdinand," cried Mrs. Ruhl as police arrived on the scene. Police nevertheless reported it took a few minutes to persuade Duke to return to his pen. He finally was led back by Morton Gibson, a caretaker at the Ruhl home.

"You'd think he was one of those wild Spanish bulls with fire shooting out of his nostrils," exclaimed Mrs. Ruhl when police sought to use sticks in leading the bull back home. "Duke wouldn't harm a soul. He's just curious, like a child. All animals are," she explained.

To prove how mild mannered the bull was, Mrs. Ruhl pointed out that her two children, Jimmy, 12, and Sidney, 6, had been playing in the pen with the bull, apparently a few minutes before Duke made up his mind to travel.

So bored was Duke by his journey, that he lay down to sleep by his two calves, Christmas and Rose.

Trend of Times: Even Dogs Learning to Be 'Good Soldiers'

IT'S A DOG'S LIFE—Glenn Studebaker, president of the Capital Dog Training Club, with his Boxer, and Mrs. Harvey J. Brown, with her Doberman Pinscher, teach their pets to "heel" or walk properly beside them.

Once a week at Military Field, in Rock Creek Park, a group of otherwise democratic dog-lovers enthusiastically watch a spectacle of perfect regimentation.

They are members of the Capital Dog Training Club. They bring to the field Great Danes, and Boxers, and Pekinese—all types of dogs, thoroughbred and those of mixed and lesser strain. (In principle, the class is completely democratic.)

The dictator is Alfred Frank, professional dog trainer. He puts the canines through a course in obedience that would make a "Milquetoast" look like an anarchist.

Fundamentals of the instruction are to make the dog answerable to such commands as "to heel," with and without leash, and "sit" and "recall."

A properly trained dog upon hearing the command "to heel" springs to the left of his master, walks alongside him with his head on a level with his master's knee.

On "recall" the dog races back from any distance to which a voice command can carry, sits directly in front of his master head up and listening.

Finer points in the art of training involve retrieving objects on the flat and over jumps up to 4 feet. He must become able to trail complete strangers after one whiff of his scent and when the trail is 24 hours old.

The American Kennel Club annually awards degrees to dogs completing the courses. These are C. D., for "companion dogs" successful in the elementary course; C. D. X., "companion dogs excellent," and the postgraduate degree of U. D. or useful dog. This last is awarded only after very severe tests, but several of the dogs in the Capital Training Club have won it.

In summer about 20 dogs work out weekly at Military Field. In winter as many as 47 twice a week.

Glenn W. Studebaker, of 104 Eastwood avenue, Norwood Park, Md., explained the club's purpose this way: "In Europe dogs are trained so they can be used by the army and the police. Here we make our dogs useful and obedient for the fun of competition, and just because we like dogs."

U. S. Men Softening, Says A. E. F. Boxing Coach

Because "Americans are taking the easiest way of life . . . and getting softer every day," considerably more men would be physically unfit for Army duty today than at the time of the first World War, Prof. William R. Whipp, A. E. F. boxing instructor, declared last night.

Speaking before the Christian Endeavor Society of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, Prof. Whipp warned Americans must build up their physiques if they are to stave off an invasion of

N. Y. Years Behind D. C. In Insurance Plan

New York City has saved about $4,200,000 in the last six years by a policy of not insuring its public buildings, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia stated in a report released yesterday.

But the world's largest city has no reason to brag over its ingenuity, according to District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan. The Capital adopted the same practice "between 30 and 40 years ago."

The saving is due to the fact that premiums on public buildings are high and because "municipal fire departments are unusually interested in fires in municipal buildings, average fire loss is slight."

War Theme Of Sermons In District

World Unrest In Relation To America, Pulpit Topics

In face of the spread of total warfare, "total preparation" by the United States is necessary, and that means "total responsibility" for its citizens, Dr. Reginald H. Stone told his congregation at Lincoln Road Methodist Church yesterday.

Although he did not specifically mention conscription, he said the present situation puts a responsibility "on all of us to do our share rather than to place the burden on those who would volunteer."

On the theme, "Security Through Change," Dr. Harold M. Dudley, guest speaker at Brookland Methodist Church yesterday, said:

"The United States faces a difficult time in the years ahead. The security found in traditional and accepted customs of the past may prove no more effective in standing the stress and strain of the contemporary unrest than did the Maginot Line.

"Our best hope of keeping spiritual principles alive is in intelligent change. An adaptation to meet new conditions is required of the Nation; it is expected of each one of us. To hang onto the old, when effective living requires modification, is to die," Dr. Dudley said.

Church of the Reformation

In a sermon on "Propaganda: For Jesus' Sake," the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, associate pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, pointed out that every individual is a propagandist for some idea, group or loyalty, in whatever direction he casts his influence.

Calling attention to the conflicting and subtle pressures of various propaganda today, the Rev. Dr. Loew pointed out that the Christian has a personal responsibility to make his influence effective in behalf of his beliefs.

The Rev. Nathaniel C. Acton, curate, St. John's Church, Lafayette square, in his sermon there yesterday, said:

"There are needs in our world today which wait for their fulfillment in the lives of God-possessed men and women, those who dare to dream and to follow down the difficult roads to which their prophetic vision leads. . . ."

When Christianity "ceased being the faith of a desperate minority" and became the faith of dominant groups, "it gained the whole world, but it lost a great portion of its life," the Rev. Mr. Acton said.

"The present call of Christianity is to men and women who are willing to sacrifice for the faith not counting the cost, and to show that His spirit lives in a world which at this time seems to be on the verge of destruction."

National City Church

Dr. C. E. Lemmon, pastor of First Christian Church, Columbia, Mo., preaching at National City Christian Church, pointed out "A Beatitude for Dark Days" in the text, "Behold we call them blessed that endureth." He emphasized the need for the quality of endurance in days of confusion and depression.

"Some cynics say that this generation of youth is soft. But I don't believe it," Dr. Lemmon said, drawing on his observations of sacrifice and hard work among youth in the college community where he lives.

Firemen Free Pup Wedged 3 Days Between Buildings

Saving human lives is their run-of-the-mine occupation, but members of the District Fire Department's Rescue Squad No. 1 demonstrated yesterday they are also kind to animals.

Faint sounds of a dog's whines had been coming from somewhere near Twelfth and E streets northeast since Friday, but neighbors had been unable to find the origin.

Yesterday they located the source—a pint-sized white dog, wedged between a brick building and a garage at the rear of 519 Twelfth street. Capt. J. A. Mayhew and his rescue squad from Fire Station No. 1 extricated the trembling canine. Emaciated and frightened, the animal was given a bowl of milk at the Animal Rescue League. The owner was not known.

Traffic Charge Halts Wedding Party

Love that laughs at locksmiths allegedly made it through a red traffic light here yesterday and a happy wedding procession of some 15 cars was compelled to visit the First Police Precinct Station.

The wedding was solemnized at the Holy Rosary Church, Third and F streets northwest. The procession set out. At the intersection of Seventh and G streets northwest, Scout Car No. 11 drove alongside.

Policemen W. A. Elliott and J. R. Helwig charged Milo Ptacek, 24, 605 Taft avenue, Hillside, Md., the best man in the wedding, with driving through the red light. He elected to forfeit a $10 bond, police said. Posting $10 collateral, and to appear in court on a similar charge were Leo P. Baldwin, 23, of Mount Rainier, Md.; Henry I. von Drehle, 29, of 2 Eighteenth street southeast, and Vincent L. Mattera, 22, of Capitol Heights, Md.

Thousands Brave Rain Threat to Hear Noted Soprano in Washington Debut; Charles O'Connell Conducts Orchestra

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Charles O'Connell conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Sunday night at the Potomac Watergate, with Helen Traubel as soloist. Program: Miniature Suite (John Christopher Smith), Symphony No. 4 in C minor (Schubert), "Gottes Macht und Vorsehung" (Beethoven), "Divinities du Styx" (Gluck), Two Hebraic Poems (Harl McDonald), "Daybreak" (McDonald), "Deep River" (Burleigh), "There Is No Death" (Geoffrey O'Hara), "Cordoba" (Albeniz), Dance of Apprentices and Entrance of Mastersingers from "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner).

Although all omens were unfavorable, the good luck of the National Symphony Orchestra prevailed over the weather last evening at the Potomac Watergate, and the summer's record of no postponements because of rain remained unbroken. At sunset the prospect was very dubious, with heavy clouds rolling up from the south, and the probability of a storm cut down the attendance in the reserved sections to a noticeable degree. But the thousands of music-lovers who were not bluffed by the threat made up an audience that kept the seasonal average high.

Expectancy was alert at the first appearance in Washington of Helen Traubel whose recent artistic feats with the Metropolitan Opera had advanced her to the foremost rank of American sopranos. Her singing did not disappoint those who were prepared to hear a great voice used with consummate control. She surprised her auditors, however, by her unprogrammed entrance to sing the national anthem with the orchestra, and their intentness upon her tones was such that few of them joined in the singing.

Mme. Traubel's first official offering was Beethoven's impressive affirmation of faith, "Gottes Macht und Vorsehung," which she sang in English, following it with the dramatic aria, "Divinites du Styx," from Gluck's "Alceste." Her readings had dignity and power, for they were sincerely felt and devoid of histronic showiness.

Her share of the second part of the concert was devoted to Harl McDonald's fine song, "Daybreak"; Harry Burleigh's arrangement of "Deep River," and Goeffrey O'Hara's "There Is No Death." Charles O'Connell stepped down from the podium to accompany "Deep River" at the piano, either because he could find no orchestral version or because Mme. Traubel felt that the song would be more moving in its sheer simplicity. If the latter supposition is correct, her judgment was infallible.

To the demand for extra numbers, Mme. Traubel responded generously with "Vol lo Sapete," from "Cavalleria Rusticana;" Richard Strauss' "Zueignung," and Oley Speaks' "Morning," in which she had the assistance of her own accompanist.

Mr. O'Connell, who conducted with the authority and the forcefulness that he has previously displayed on his visits here, gave us a Schubert symphony that is not in the rut of repertory. Instead of the B minor or the C major, he read the C minor with an eloquence that brought out the full implications of its applied title of "Tragic."

His other selections were his arrangement of the piano piece, "Cordoba," by Albeniz, and the dance of the apprentices and entrance of the mastersingers from "Die Meistersinger."

Guild Speaker Points Way To 'True Peace'

Catholic Church's Unity Discussed By Miss Dashiell

The foundation on which "a right social order and a true peace can be built" are found in "the principles of the Christian Revelation which we Catholics present to the world today," the Rev. Alonzo McDonnell, C. S. P., said at the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild meeting yesterday in Franklin Park.

Miss Mary Ellen Dashiell said in her discussion of the Catholic Church's unity at a guild meeting in Public Library Park:

"The more history we read, the more we see that nations, institutions and societies tend to disruption and disunity . . . In the midst of these divisions . . . the Catholic Church has maintained a surprising unity.

"Within the Catholic group, there is unity today, unity of belief and unity in moral issues. And this unity has been preserved during nineteen centuries. This fact of unity is inexplicable unless one admits that God has had a guiding hand in its preservation."

Miss Madeline Kane in a talk at the meeting in Public Library Park said:

"The world today needs to learn that it must return to Christ if it is ever to have refreshment and peace again.

"It is not the resources of the world but in the hidden resources of their faith that men may find refreshment, light and peace—in a word, life."

Poolesville P.-T. A. To Picnic August 22

The annual picnic of the Poolesville (Md.) Parent-Teacher Association will be held at Monocacy Park, near Dickerson, August 22. Harry Rhodes and Mrs. Charles M. Tipton head the committees in charge. Games and a basket dinner will feature the occasion.

Rockville School Fetes Nonagenarian

Mrs. Ellen Armstrong, Rockville's oldest woman resident, was 90 years old yesterday. The occasion was observed by the Sunday School of the Rockville Methodist Church at the close of Sunday School, when Mrs. Armstrong was presented with a cake by the Sunday School and with a basket of flowers by the Beulah A. Dove class of which she has long been a member.

The cake, which bore nine candles, each representing a decade of her life, was presented by the Rev. W. Rosenberger, pastor of the church. Mrs. Armstrong spoke briefly in telling of her appreciation. The primary class sung.

Mrs. Armstrong is the widow of the Rev. A. O. Armstrong, at one time pastor of the Rockville Church.

Report Says Youth Needs Job Teaching

Educators Urge Work Experience To Implement Book Learning

Charging that important needs of most of the 6,500,000 high school pupils of the Nation are not being met, a committee of 10 educators in a report yesterday to the American Youth Commission here advocated "actual work experience" as a part of high school curricula.

Other major recommendations in the report, which urged "radical changes" at many points in courses of study, included the following suggestions:

Courses in social studies should be expanded; instruction concerning personal problems should be given to youth; high schools should give instruction in improved methods of reading to supplement such instruction in elementary schools.

The committee, headed by Ben G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh public schools, pointed out that one-third of the unemployed workers in the United States are young people between the ages of 15 and 24, making about 4,000,000 youths out of work.

Report Hailed

"Yet the great majority of pupils in secondary schools are led by the studies they pursue to hope for careers in 'white-collar' jobs," she stated. "Any examination of the opportunities that are really open makes it clear that the hopes fostered by the present educational system are sure to be disappointed for most of those now registered in secondary schools."

The report was hailed as "one of the most important contributions to secondary education of this generation," by Dr. Floyd W. Reeves, director of the American Youth Commission.

The Federal work program of the CCC and NYA was given recognition in it as having "given to a great many young people the training that they need in work habits. . . . The educational system of the United States will never again be what it was before the Federal agencies for youth began to provide work opportunities," it was stated.

Such subjects as algebra, geometry, English composition and foreign languages "are now in many cases conducted in a form which cannot be defended in the light of modern conditions," the committee commented.

Reform Needed

It added that the ninth grade needs "a radical reform," because numbers of young people turn away from the school at that point because of an uninviting and discouraging program.

The document, titled "What the High Schools Ought to Teach" and which will soon be published in full, was formulated by Thomas H. Briggs, professor of secondary education, Teachers College, Columbia University; Will French, professor of secondary education, Teachers College, Columbia Univeristy; Oscar Granger, principal, Haverford Township (Pa.) High School; Charles A. Prosser, director, William Dunwoody Institute, Minneapolis, Minn; Francis T. Spaulding, dean, graduate school of education, Harvard University; Alexander J. Stoddard, superintendent of schools, Philadelphia; George D. Strayer, professor of educational administration, Teachers College, Columbia University; Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of public schools, Atlanta; Ralph W. Tyler, chairman, department of education, University of Chicago, and Ben G. Graham.

Young Adults' Religious Forum Turns To Heated Discussion of Conscription as Speaker Warns U. S. Must Be Prepared

A young adults' religious meeting, which began calmly with a Sioux Indian girl "reciting" the Lord's Prayer in sign language, turned into a heated discussion of conscription and conscientious objectors last night.

At the Lincoln Fellowship Forum at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, the question of military service was injected at the end of the meeting by an impromptu remark from Harry McQuown.

McQuown, 32, a building guard, warned the group against swallowing the conscientious objector's viewpoint without serious thought. He referred to a report which a member of the forum had given at a previous meeting on that question.

"I don't want to go to war, and I don't like the thought of being shot," but the country must be prepared, McQuown declared, as several listeners impatiently sought to add their comments.

Mary Kjelgaard, president of the youth cabinet of the church, asked the group to save the "free-for-all" until after the service. More than half of the 35 persons at the meeting lingered to enter into the discussion.

"Our ancestors carried guns under their arms, and we've got to protect ourselves," a mild-looking little girl in a blue dress blurted out. She refused to tell her name saying that her aunt had warned her not to get into any arguments on the subject.

"Well, I'm in favor of letting the Senate settle it," said William O'Neal, 21.

Audrey Warrior, the Sioux girl, who is a stenographer in the Office of Indian Affairs, was the star of the planned part of the program. Silently she translated the Lord's Prayer and the hymn, "Nearer My God To Thee" into sign language as Virginia Fisher gave voice to them.

Miss Warrior wore a white buckskin costume, heavily fringed and beaded, which her mother made for her high school graduation present in Poplar, Mont.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

One Veteran Publicist Succeeds Ditto at Loew's

Bell to New York, Terrell Takes Over; Wilson Line Continues 'Kid Talent Quest;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

A TEAR-SPOTTED PAGE of encomiums from Eastern Division Manager Carter T. Barron, of Loew's, Inc., finally confirms the persistent rumor that has been bruited about the Capital for several weeks now and more than once has been veiledly alluded to here.

BELL

On Monday, August 19, J. Raymond Bell—no relation—is relinquishing his duties as director of advertising, publicity and exploitation with the local Loew houses to accept a similar post in the office of Howard Dietz, national director of advertising and publicity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with headquarters in New York. He assumes his new assignment with the blessings of Joseph R. Vogel, manager of all Loew theater operations; Oscar A. Doob, chief publicist for Loew's, Inc., and, of course, Carter Barron—although there is a note of keen regret in all the laudatory things Mr. Barron has to say of the associate executive who has served the Loew interests in Washington with such distinction for the past seven years.

Ray came to Washington on June 30, 1933, from the managership of the Palace Theater, in Athens, Ga., having previously served as radio and motion picture editor of the Atlanta Georgian, followed by two years on the staff of the Detroit Times. He also is a graduate attorney-at-law.

It would be difficult to catalogue all of the honors that have fallen to Ray Bell during his seven-year tour of duty in the Capital. By the superior quality of his work he has won two trips to Europe, a handful of $500 awards and a roomful of plaques and certificates of merit in competition with the highest-geared man-power in the United States, engaged in the same field of activity.

He will leave Washington with the best wishes and highest regard of all who ever have been associated with him in a business levying heavy demands upon originality, mental and physical energy and integrity. But one wonders if even New York's high-pressure hurly-burly will be equal to breaking the lad of his inveterate yen for punning. I hope not—for the time being, at least. Why shouldn't that Broadway gang suffer for awhile, just as we have for the past seven years? Boy, does Ray pull some awful ones!

Mr. Barron, incidentally, has exercised a happy choice in appointing Mr. Bell's successor. The local post, come August 19, will be filled by Dan S. Terrell, himself no stranger to the Washington theater and its people. Formerly assistant dramatic editor of the Herald, Dan later served a five-year trick with Director Frank La Falce in the Warner Brothers publicity department, resigning to become public relations director at American University. Mr. Terrell also wears his medals, one of his most prized being a Carnegie Award for saving a bather from drowning at Bethany Beach a few years back. Ed Gidley will continue as Mr. Terrell's assistant, just as he has been so long for Brother Bell. Hail and farewell, I believe, is what it is customary to say in such circumstances.

So when Rick La Falce slapped the little 6-inch disc on his portable chatter-box and switched on the gadget, the first thing it said was, "Hello, Mr. Bell, do you recognize my voice? This is Eileen Ritter, of the Earle Theater." You could have knocked me over with an 80-ton tank. What Eileen did was to go on and describe the new recording stunt they are doing to all the solo voices in the "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" business at the Earle this week. Every volunteer soloist receives a recording of his or her vocal effort on the spot. And will some of them be surprised!

In keeping with the progress of fast-growing Arlington County, District Manager Wade Pearson, of the Virginia Neighborhood Theaters, bids all and most of the sundry to the grand opening of the Arlington Recreational Center on Thursday night, August 15, at 6:30. This new project will combine the entertainment facilities of the Arlington Theater and the Arlington Bowling Alleys. The theater bill will be featured by Irene Dunne and Cary Grant in "My Favorite Wife" and the issue of "Information Please" in which Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell L. Willkie is the erudite and vocal honor guest.

The entire output of 86 Warner Brothers Vitaphone short subjects for 1940-41 will be produced on the Burbank, Calif., home lot, with Production Manager Jack L. Warner in personal charge. All will be given feature-picture treatment and more than half of the 18 two-reel subjects and 68 single-reelers will be made in color.

The second weekly "Kiddies' Talent Quest" will be held today, under the auspices of the Wilson Line and Station WJSV, aboard the streamlined S. S. Mount Vernon. Everything half price for the youngsters, as usual. Auditions are held aboard the boat and a half-hour free show then is presented in the open-air theater at Marshall Hall Park. More than 2,000 juveniles and their parents made the trip last week. The business will be carried on every Monday through August. More fun!

Them-Was-the-Good-Old-Days Note

Who remembers when the picture houses had a tough time making a film stand up for three days—instead of that many weeks?

You Play Ball With Me, I'll Play Hob With You!

OLYMPE BRADNA, JON HALL AND VICTOR McLAGLEN as they will be seen in United Artists "South of Pago Pago," opening Friday on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Mr. Hall established his prowess in this sort of thing in the memorable "Hurricane." Frances Farmer and Gene Lockhart are other important members of the cast assembled by Producer Ed ward Small

Short Reels For Realists At Trans-Lux

Officer Donald Duck and the Nazis over Dover may be said to contribute equally to the thrills of the current Trans-Lux program. But the Nazis' efforts make them look like Donald Duck airmen, while the real Donald Duck (bless 'im) brings down a blitzkrieg of laughter.

Preparations for a possible Armageddon involving the United States continue to dominate the newsreel pictures. Something should be done about this. We're not clear just what should be done, but perhaps it might be a good idea to hire Cecil B. de Mille to figure out new angles on dramatizing airplanes, pom-pom guns and tanks—with a strict proviso in his contract for new angles in human interest each week. (Bathing beauties on tanks would certainly dumbfound the enemy. And even Der Adolf would be enchanted by the spectacle of Hedy La Marr descending in a parachute.)

Those who thought Curacao was just a place where they made curacao will be happily disenchanted by pictures of this tropical Eden. We can't remember whether it was in the East or West Indies, but let's hope that it's the West Indies, for curacao's sake. The picture is one of the best of those escapist scenics.

But the Trans-Lux program is in toto, one for realists and those who realize that 1940 is 1940 and it's just too bad. Shots of the Italian desert troops show them mightily fit, and, inferentially, mighty sore about those Guadalajara stories.

MARY HARRIS.

The New Yorker

By Bob Trout — Radio Commentator

Radio Reporter's Journal: Campaign Issue

New York, Aug. 11.

DIGESTION: Broadcasting the national political convention is radio's most physically exhausting job. The candidates get the votes, the delegates get a lot of souvenirs, and the broadcasters get nightmares. And, frequently, that malady known in microphone circles as "radio stomach."

TRAINS: Broadcasting Presidential campaigns is a busier job than that of one-armed paperhanger. It's like being a traveling salesman with a wooden leg and a sprained ankle. In radio's earlier years, we threw a few hundred pounds of "portable" equipment and a microphone or two into a Pullman berth on the candidate's train, and crossed our fingers as the trip began. Now a Presidential candidate's train is rigged with microphone-stands made fast to the railing of the observation platform, so that the nominee can speak to a crowd gathered at a small railroad station—or standing on the rails in the middle of the desert—and the Nation can hear the speech. And there is a loud speaker in the dining car, which allows the newspaper correspondents to hear the talk without interrupting lunch to jump off the train and run back to the last car, which is always the candidate's home on wheels.

FAME: Frequently these spectators at small towns have never before seen a Presidential candidate. In 1936, an old farmer came up to President Roosevelt's train at a stop in the West and walked along the tracks peering into the windows of every car. When Secret Service men questioned him, he explained that he wanted to see President Coolidge.

LAUNDRY: You can take a trip to California and spend only three nights aboard a train. On a campaign train, we sometimes live in a Pullman car for as long as two weeks. The radio correspondent who gets the C. B. S. assignment to travel with Wendell Willkie will pack his bag for a two months' trip. On a 1936 trip, after many days of traveling through the drought country, a stop at Salt Lake City provided a welcome opportunity to get some laundry done. My shirts came back marked with my initials, "R. T." But my indignant friends soon discovered that I was wearing their shirts, too. An inspection of luggage showed that our laundry was completely mixed. The laundry man had marked everybody's clothes with "R. T." Meaning—to him—"Roosevelt train."

INAUGURATION: I am wondering whether Washington will be as cold next Inauguration Day as it was on the Nation's first January Inauguration in 1937. The cold rain "froze" my hand tightly around my microphone. Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, wearing a black skull cap and holding a blanket over his knees, placed a newspaper under his feet for protection against the torrent.

WHITE HOUSE: Things are more informal on this side of the ocean. President Roosevelt broadcast his acceptance speech to the recent Chicago convention while seated at a White House desk, in his shirt sleeves. The night he made his first fireside chat, just after the banks had closed in 1933, those of us who were in the White House were worried about the lighted cigarette which the President held, in a holder, between two fingers as he went on the air. All that happened was that the President crushed it out in an ash tray on his desk while he was speaking.

CONVENTIONS: One part of broadcasting a convention consists of sitting in the radio booth above the speakers' platform, keeping tabs on the balloting and describing the tumultuous demonstrations as the delirious delegates carry their State banners in the hectic processions on the floor below. At the Philadelphia Republican Convention, I was counting the votes when my voice was accidentally switched on the public address system in the auditorium. Convention Chairman Joseph Martin, thinking the booming voice belonged to a delegate, whacked his gavel and said: "Will the gentleman please repeat his question?" I didn't.

Mikestress of Songs Says 'Hello'

"writes a few letters" to the drama desks by way of demonstrating the technique of the new recording innovation inaugurated on the "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" program, at the Earle Theater this week. In Hollywood

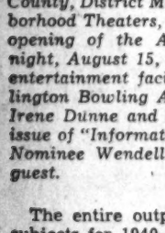
—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Aug. 11.

Clark Gable has had no misunderstanding with Metro. He just won't play in a picture based on a fluttery character which the studio didn't even know about . . . I'm wondering if the Gables aren't thinking of an adoption. They've been spending some mighty happy hours at a children's sheltering home. And speaking of children, Mrs. Ernest Torrence is bringing Mrs. Clive Brook and her two children over from England, while Clive spends ten hours a day on top of a London bank, nursemaiding a machine gun.



HOPPER

Those were strong words Seymour Hicks had to say about his fellow actors who remained in Hollywood, and seems to me it would have been better for Richard "Dimples" Greene if he had gotten together with Col. Roland Kingham before returning to Hollywood and more pictures. The colonel said, "No, we can't give him a commission as an officer, but we have a place for him in the ranks and if he makes good, he'll have a good chance for promotion."

With Hollywood "names" being again summoned to tell all they know about Communistic activities, I hope this time they'll go through with it, rather than make headlines. There's nothing so devastating as having a sword hanging, justly or unjustly, over one's head.

Noel Coward's play, "Tonight at 8:30," proved many things. First, that Binnie Barnes is one of our best rough and tumble comediennes, which we've known for a long time, even though for the past four months her studio hasn't known what to do with her. Well, her performance in "Red Peppers" was the hit of the evening. Some of our million dollar babies needed a microphone on the stage—they couldn't be heard beyond the fifth row. In fact, if we're not careful, Hollywood will become a race of whisperers in more ways than one.

Doug Fairbanks, jr., had charm, but isn't nearly as good a stage actor as he was when he played "Young Woodley." Connie Bennett looked stunning. Reggie Owen and Nigel Bruce proved they're good in anything. Gladys Cooper and Basil Rathbone were excellent when they could be heard, and Muriel Hutchison, whom we brought out from the stage for an important part in "The Women" and then let her play a maid, revealed a superb talent.

The costume Paulette Goddard is going to wear at the Comedians vs. Leading Men's Baseball Game tonight is called "The Sarong That's All Wrong," but it's mighty cute—and on her, a knockout. Speaking of that, our glamour girls are up in arms over a new magazine with pictures and article titled "Bosoms Are Back in Style"

Don't be surprised if Bob Montgomery heads our campaign for Wendell Willkie. He's meeting up with him this week. He'd be good, too . . . A bit of embarrassment among our higher ups when our Ambassador to Russia, Mr. Steinhardt, tried to find Greta Garbo to say hello. He knew her well in Sweden. But none of Hollywood's top crust could tell him where she lived, because they'd never met her.

Tony Martin, who's returning to Metro with a juicy contract, is one of the greatest success stories ever to come out of this town. When Zanuck let Tony go, he was the personification of a licked guy. Not only his picture career had gone up in smoke, but his marriage, too. He's fought his way through radio, night clubs, personal appearances — women actually swoon when he sings. He gets anywhere from $6,000 to $10,000 a week, which betters what Caruso once made.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 11. (INS).—There is more in the purchase of "Some Day I'll Find You," the $35,000 Charles Hoffman story, than meets the eye. Metro bought it on the eve of its publication in cosmopolitan and paid that amount of money because they see in it not only another Capt. Flagg-Sergt. Quirt epic for Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy, but a chance to do a repeat with the "Boom Town" cast. If it is possible to get Claudette Colbert, she and Hedy Lamarr will complete the colorful foursome.

PARSONS

The story of "Some Day I'll Find You" is that of two war correspondents, who travel from place to place in the course of their duty, leaving behind the girls they might have loved. It ends with the German occupation of Paris and has lots of up-to the-minute excitement.

I told you just last week that this was going to be a banner year for Ann Sothern. What more could a gal ask than a role such as Jean Harlow played in "Red Dust" coming up—and Bob Taylor for a hero in a little opus titled "Tropical Hurricane." They assure me at M.-G.-M. that this new Wilson Collision story is not a revamped version of "Red Dust," but the more I hear of the plot the more suspicious I am. It's about a lady who "ain't what she ought to be" who is taken under the wing of a handsome, brawny hero down in the tropics. Annie and Bob are a new duet at the box office but don't set your heart on seeing them too soon, for Bob still has to finish "Flight Command" and Ann first has to do her song and dance stint in "Feeling Like A Million."

Who says it's bad box-office for a husband to make screen love to his own wife? Irene Hervey and Allan Jones who are Mr. and Mrs. in real life, as you know, have been breaking records at the Paramount Theater in New York personal-appearing with their movie, "The Boys from Syracuse." In fact, this Mr. and Mrs. act has gone over so well that Universal is paging Irene to return to the Coast to get ready for "Riviera," with Allan. Virginia Bruce has the other top femme role in a cast that already includes Robert Cummings and Abott and Costello. Eddie Sutherland will megaphone.

No longer do actors turn up their noses at minor roles, for if they score they're sure to be sought after by every studio in the business. Curt Bois was such a riot as the snoopy juror in "Lady in Question" that his telephone started ringing the day after the preview. He has now been signed by M.-G.-M. for "Bittersweet," with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. Metro also handed a new long term deal to Chill Wills, who plays harmony, the cook, in "Boom Town." Wills was so outstanding that he has been nabbed already for the next Nick Carter. He is a younger edition of Walter Brennan.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Miriam Hopkins and Anatole Litvak, her former husband, dining together. Talk on the Warner lot is that Miriam has never been in a happier frame of mind; Brenda Marshall is pricing clipper tickets to fly to the Philippines to see her father; Annabella, who recently underwent an operation in New York, returned today and Ty Power plans to take her to Alaska as soon as he can get away.

Countess Dorothy Di Frasso entertained with a dinner party that went on to the wee sma' hours. Barbara Hutton, her house guests, Lady Moore and the Dan Hunters, and, of course, the attentive Cary Grant, were among those present. Also Elsa Maxwell, the Sam Goldwyns, Charlie Feldmans, Richard Gully, Ricardo Cortez, etc.; Marlene Dietrich was really an eyeful in a white gown and long white fox coat at the comedians vs. leading mens baseball game. Paulette Goddard looked cute in a sweater and skirt without any furbelows; Elsie the Cow, parading around the grounds almost stole the show; Jack Benny was burned up over the stars who had promised to put in an appearance and failed to do so and said so in a speech.

Linda Watkins and Cliff Lewis, Para publicity head, talking things over in the commissary; Chiquita, the Mexican dancer at La Conga, gets all the town's unattached males sooner or later; Mary Brian and Bob Smith, wealthy New Yorker, at a ringside table in slapsy Maxie's; Guy Kibbee, they tell me, was a terrific hit at the printers' convention in San Francisco.

That's all today, see you tomorrow!

Cookie Ties Things Up

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 11.—Jack Doyle, the veteran odds fixer, today made the Cleveland Indians the favorites to win their first American League pennant in 20 years. He fixed their price as even money to outfoot the field in what we have nicknamed the junior circuit, and expects them to engage in an all-Ohio world series in October against the Cincinnati Reds.

CONSIDINE

Doyle designates Detroit as second choice, at 6-to-5. Behind the Tigers he names the Boston Red Sox, at 4-to-1, and the Yanks at 8-to-1. He fixed the Yankees at 8-to-1 an hour after watching Red Ruffing and Steve Sundra shut out the A's 2-0 with two hits. Doyle ignored the other clubs in the league.

Cincinnati tops Doyle's National League "line" as 1-to-3 shots to repeat. Brooklyn's new price is 2½-to-1. The Cards and Giants are 6-to-1 in the book and the Cubs 10-to-1. The others, Doyle says, do not matter.

"I'm putting the Indians up on top because of Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack," Doyle elaborated. "Those two kids have given Cleveland the thing it needs—a tight infield. No club can win a pennant without one. I've been looking at baseball for 50 years and a club must have infielders, if nothing else.

Doyle says that he was so sold on the Yanks last year and at the beginning of this season that he decided that the infield of Dahlgren, Gordon, Crosetti and Rolfe was as good as the "greatest infield of all time." Doyle's "greatest" was the old Boston combine of Fred Tenney, Bob Lowe, Herman Long and Jimmy Collins.

"But this year I've changed my mind about the Yankee infield," Doyle said. "It just can't be mentioned with that old Boston bunch. It never could hit with them, of course, and this year it certainly can't field like those old-timers did. Cleveland's got the class of the infields. Those kids around second are terrific, and Trosky and Keltner are good enough."

Doyle now doesn't even look upon his once beloved Yanks as even a good dark-horse selection, at 8 to 1. He thinks the "sleeper" in the American League is Boston. "The schedule's right for them," he said. "Cleveland and the Tigers will go at one another nine more times. Might be some throat-cutting there. And when Cleveland comes out of that one they'll have to worry about that White Sox team, which doesn't seem to cool off. The Red Sox about the same time will be meeting the Athletics, Senators, yes, and the Yanks. They might even make up a lot of ground, if the Tigers cross me and hold Cleveland even.

That's why I can't put the Tigers up there on top. York's a joke around first base, and Gehringer, Bartell and Higgins are on the shady side. You watch. When the Tigers Crack it will be the infield that goes. But getting back to the Indians, they've got that good line down the middle that is a requisite. You know, good catcher, good pitching, good second base combination and with that kid Weatherly out there in center, great protection there. And don't overlook that kid Feller. He's a throwback. If the pennant race stays tough right down to the end, you'll see him in there as much as some of those old timers used to pitch. He can take it, too."

Doyle, who outed the Yanks at 2-to-5 before the opening of the season, and who kept them on top until the Tigers swept that three-game series with the fading champs just before the Yanks' last Western trip, insists that he never saw a crackup comparable to New York's.

"I've seen great teams crack up before . . . A lot of them," he mused. "But they cracked up differently. The ones I have in mind, like seme of Connie Mack's old teams or some of John McCraw's, well, they just ran down. The whole team blew. But the Yanks aren't an old team. They had plenty of replacements, too. Plenty of good fresh men coming in, after they started winning their pennants. Look at Keller; he's only been in the league a year. And Gordon and Henrich and those younger pitchers. And even DiMaggio. You can't call him a veteran. I've never seen anything like it."

Abrams Slight Choice Over Cocoa Tonight

Louis Kid Cocoa engaged in an unscheduled six-round workout yesterday at Turner's Arena in preparation for tonight's 10-round bout against George Abrams, Washington's fourth-ranking middleweight of the world, at Griffith Stadium.

The Puerto Rican apparently is not taking Abrams lightly as witnessed by yesterday's brisk drill. After working in the ring, he tapered off by hitting the bag, and appeared in the best of shape.

Abrams is still held a slight favorite at 6-5 in the betting. The Washingtonian, who is supposed to weigh-in at 160-pounds today at 2 p. m., will hold about a 10-pound advantage over the No. 1 welterweight contender.

The bout tonight will be the fourth mixed match held in Washington since the advent of the fight game here. In previous fights, Cocoa Kid won over 'Wild Bill' McDowell and Phil Furr, and Holman Williams, Joe Louis' protege thrashed McDowell, two weeks ago.

Fight Looms As Natural

Its been ovar eight months ago since Abrams appeared here. Most of his fighting recently has taken place in New York under the guidance of Manager Chris Dundee, who also handles Phil Furr and Middleweight Champion Ken Overlin.

The fight shapes up as one of the best of the season, and Promoter Joe Turner expects a turnout of about 7,000 fans in view of the large advance sale.

Both fighters hold impressive records. Cocoa has won 46 straight, and Abrams is the winner of 39 of his 42 engagements. Georgie holds

Dizzy Dean Hurls Scoreless Ball For 11 Innings

Oklahoma City, Aug. 11 (AP).—Dizzy Dean pitched four-hit ball for 11 innings for Tulsa today in the opener of a Texas League double header with Oklahoma City, but Orvil Grove outlasted him to gain a 1 to 0 victory in the twelfth.

Dean, who has tossed 21 consecutive scareless innings, stepped out in the twelfth for a pinch hitter. The first ball thrown by his reliever, Emil Kush, was sailed by Don Kolloway for a double which started the Indians toward their winning run.

Bobby Takes His Fourth Title in Row

Don McNeill Loses, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, 6-4; Riggs Stages Uphill Rally for Victory

By the Associated Press

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Bobby Riggs won the Eastern Grass Court championship for the fourth successive year today when he defeated Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, 6—2, 3—6, 7—5, 6—4.

After a division of the first two sets, McNeill punched out a 5-0 advantage in the third, and against service in the sixth game, he reached three set points. But Riggs, who has been in that predicament before, forced three errors from McNeill to win the game and set the stage for another of his characteristic uphill rallies.

All sorts of superb strokes streamed off his racquet as he won the next six successive games, holding McNeill to one earned point in that span, and limiting his own errors to a minimum. When he finally tucked the set away at 7-5, the usually decorous tennis crowd went mad.

The final set after a ten-minute intermission was distinctly an anti-climax.

Riggs was terrific. His short, churning lefs carried him rapidly over all the turf. He made winning returns of shots that should have been played defensively. He stormed to the net early in every exchange.

In the third set, McNeill fought stubbornly until Bobby drew to 3—5. The Don slumped as others have done before him, and the last four games of the stirring streak went to Bobby as if he had paid for them.

McNeill Rallies

Riggs quickly achieved a 5—1 advantage in the last set, and then McNeill became the tiger. He broke

BOBBY RIGGS

Bobby's delivery twice, held his own service once and drew to within 5—4. He needed but one point to square it at 5—5. But that was the point Bobby decided he was going to win himself. He did, and with it the match.

The women's doubles finals went to Alice Marble and Sarah Palfrey, who defeated Mary Hardwick and Valerie Scott, of England, 6—4, 6—3.

Don McNeill and Frank Parker, the country's top-ranking team, were defeated in the finals of the men's doubles by Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, and Henry Prusoff, of Seattle. The scores were 6—3, 6—4, 19—21, 6—2. This match was finished in almost complete darkness.

Bucs Capture Double-Header From Chicubs

Dick Lanahan Wins Second Game, Allows 4 Hits; Scores, 7-3, 5-1

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 11.—Recapturing a berth in the first division, the Pittsburgh Pirates trounced Chicago 7-3 and 5-1 in both games of a double-header today to give the Bucs three of the four game series.

Pushing the Cubs out of fourth place and into the second division for the second time in the series, the sizzling Pirates jumped to within two games of the third place New York Giants.

The double-barreled triumph came on six Cub errors in the first game which gave the Bucs five unearned runs, four of them in a wild eighth inning when the Cubs committed three of their bungles, and the four-hit hurling of Dick Lanahan in the nightcap.

A five-hit, four-run barrage in the third frame of the second game sent Claude Passeau to the showers and Vance Page who relieved him, allowed oniy two hits in six innings.

Both teams used three hurlers in the first duel with Johnny Lanning getting credit for the win. The twin sweep gave the Pirates 10 victories in their last 11 starts.

Tigers Lose Grip on A.L. Lead With Double Loss

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 11.—The Chicago White Sox slapped a double defeat on the pennant-minded Detroit Tigers today, winning both games by 4-to-3 scores before 32,032 spectators. The double loss placed the Bengals in a tie with Cleveland for the league lead.

The Sox grabbed an early two-run lead in the second game while John Rigney handcuffed the Tigers in the early stages, allowing only one hit in the first six innings. But in the seventh Barney McCosky led off with a single and Hank Greenberg followed with his twenty-third homer of the season, tying the score. Rudy York then poled his twenty-first circuit blow to put the visitors ahead. Frank Higgins singled, sending Rigney to the showers. He was replaced by Clint Brown, who gave up only one hit the rest of the way.

In the eighth Joe Kuhel drew a walk off Tommy Bridges after two were out. Luke Appling singled and Taft Wright scored both of them with a rousing double to rightfield.

A Seesaw Battle

The first game was a seesaw battle all the way. Both teams counted one run in the second inning and then the Tigers went ahead with another tally in the third. The Sox tied the score again in the fourth. This ended the scoring until Kuhel connected for his twentieth home run in the seventh.

The homer, barely reaching the rightfield stands, was deflected into the playing field by a spectator. Detroit protested yainly that the blow was not a home run. Coach Bing Miller was banished from the game during the argument.

Detroit pulled up even in the eighth. L. D. (Dutch) Meyer, rookie second baseman, making his first start for the Tigers, singled and Billy Sullivan followed with another single. Bruce Campbell, batting for Starting Pitcher Buck Newsom, walked and Earl Averill, pinch-hitting for Dick Bartell, scored Meyer with an outfield fly. Pete Fox hit into a double-play.

Stage Set for Rallies

Thus the stage was set for the first of the two winning rallies. Mike Tresh singled and was forced at second by Kennedy. Lyons then rapped a long double to right center. Kennedy scoring from first.

Freddie Hutchinson, who replaced Newsom on the mound, was the losing pitcher. Rookie Meyer collected one hit in seven times at bat and scored one run.

Joe Gordon's Home Gives Yanks Victory

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 11.—The Yankees swept their three-game series with the Philadelphia Athletics today when Joe Gordon banged his twenty-first home run of the season in the eleventh inning for a 7-to-6 victory.

The Mackmen apparently had sewed up the contest with a four-run outburst in the ninth, featured by home runs by Joe Gantebein and Sam Chapman, but the Yanks came right back in their half to count twice and send the game into extra innings.

Atley Donald, third Yankee pitcher, gave a brilliant exhibition after taking over in the tenth, fanning five and allowing only one hit to get credit for the win.

Browns Earn Split in Bill With Indians

Tribe Takes Opener, 12-4, Loses Finale By 7-6 Despite Rally

By International News Service

St. Louis, Aug. 11.—Cleveland pulled into a first place tie with Detroit in the American League race today by splitting a double-header with the St. Louis Browns as the Tigers lost both sides of a twin bill to the Chciago White Sox.

Al Milnar chalked up his fifteenth victory as the Indians took the first gae, 12 to 4, and Roxie Lawson was credited with the win as the Browns squeezed out a 7-to-6 nightcap triumph before 6,500 customers.

The Indians pounded five St. Louis hurlers for 18 hits in the opener, sending Willis Hudlin to the showers in the second under a six-hit four-run barrage.

A single by Pinch-hitter Chet Laabs in the sixth with the bases loaded, and home runs by Walt Judnich and Harlond Clift in the seventh provided the punch for the Browns' victory in the final.

Johnny Allen, Al Smith and Joe Dobson worked in the nightcap.

Welsh Wins 8th D. C. Net Open Title

Playing a faster game than is his custom, Barney Welsh, Rockville lawyer-racqueter, defeated Hugh Lynch yesterday at Edgemoor, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3, for the District of Columbia Men's Open championship.

It was the eighth time the spindley barrister has won the title. And a large group of fans was certain he would win after the opening set. He never allowed Lynch an advantage and played the steadier Lynch off his feet from the net.

The victory somewhat avenged Welsh's upset in the final of the recent Middle Atlantic tournament, in which Davey Johnsen was the victor. It also gave Barney his second major tourney here this summer. Early in June he won the City of Washington meet.

Nats' Rookie Gives Bosox Only 5 Hits

22,000 See Red Sox's Tying Run Cut Off In Ninth Inning; Grove Allows 11 Hits

By Bill Burnett.

The kid nobody thought could make the leap from Class D baseball to the majors, 22-year-old Sid Hudson hit the bell again yesterday.

Owner of two one-hit performances after only four months with the Nats, Sid pitched himself a 2-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox. And his victim was Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, a veteran of 16 years of big league pitching, who was tapped for 11 safeties.

Only five scattered hits did the lanky youngster give Boston's power hitters and no bases on balls. If there was ever any doubt of the outcome in his mind, Sid's movements out there certainly hid it well. He took his eleventh triumph of the season, while Grove was suffering his third loss in nine games.

Bosox Score in Ninth

Two of its blows Boston bunched in the ninth inning, and along with a terrific error by Rick Ferrell started a rally that had 22,000 Hudson fans standing on their seats. The boys from Beantown scored their only run then, and except for an excusable gamble that didn't pan out, might have robbed Sid of his victory. At any rate, the run ended his hopes of a second consecutive shutout victory.

Dom DiMaggio obligingly gave Sid his sixth and last strikeout to start the near-fatal ninth. Then Ferrell went to work on Cramer's bunt in front of the plate, pushing and kicking it until the latter had safely reached first. Hudson's shutout prospects, however, still appeared good a few seconds later when Joe Cronin, winding up a hitless day, mildly popped to George Case in centerfield. But things started happening at that point.

Fight Racket Probe Is Demanded

Pastor's Pilot Sends Telegrams to Officials Of 'Tank' Reports

By Jack Cuddy,
United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Aug. 11.—James J. Johnston, manager of Heavyweight Bob Pastor, sent telegrams to the three New York boxing commissioners today demanding an investigation of reports that Tuesday night's fight between Pastor and Billy Conn is "in the bag" for Conn.

Johnston asked particularly that the commissioners investigate a published statement of Henry McLemore, United Press columnist, who quoted an official of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club as saying:

"If the Conn-Pastor fight is close, Conn is sure to get the decision. Conn is a flashy boxer and will catch the judges' eyes. Besides, who in the hell wants to see Pastor fight Louis again?

Johnston told reporters: "That's pretty fine talk to be coming from an official of Mike Jacobs' Twentieth Century Club. But it doesn't surprise me a bit. I've known all along that the Twentieth Century boys were out to give Pastor the works in this fight—if possible. I've tried before to get the commission to look into the situation. Now this statement is tossed right into the commissioners' teeth and they'll have to investigate."

Johnston appeared elated that

Cardinals Defeat League-Leading Cincinnati Reds Twice

Mort Cooper, Warneke Win In Twin Bill

St. Louis Takes 3-2 And 3-1 Decisions as Cincinnati Falters; Slaughter Homers

By International News Service

Cincinnati, Aug. 11.—The league-leading Reds lost ground in the National League pennant race today by dropping a double-header to St. Louis. The scores were 3 to 2 and 3 to 1.

In the opener Mort Cooper hooked up in a pitchers' duel with Paul Derringer of the Reds. The game was won in the eighth when the Cardinals scored two runs, Enos Slaughter's homer i nthis frame decided the issue.

Cooper pitched a great game, allotting Cincinnati only two hits. Derringer and his successor, Joe Beggs, allowed the Cards six hits.

The nightcap was another closely-fought foray with pitchers Lon Warneke of St. Louis and Jim Turner of Cincinnati, giving up runs in a miserly fashion.

The Cards collected 11 bingles and pulled away to a flying start by scoring twice in the first inning. For insurance, they added another in the ninth. The Reds pounded out ten hits but Warneke proved effective in the pinches.

way home from first he was thrown out, Lewis to Myer to Ferrell.

It was a perfect ending for a brilliant baseball display. Carey was out by several yards on Myer's perfect peg, and the Nats were credited with the odd-game of the Boston series.

The Nats picked up their two runs in the second and eighth innings. It took four singles—by Bloodworth, Myer, Ferrell and Hudson—to get the game's first score. But with the bases still loaded after Hudson had driven in Myer, Grove had a flash of the form which won him a 10-0 victory in the season opener. He fanned Case and Lewis in quick succession.

The eighth-inning score necessitated three more singles. Case got the first, went to second on Cronin's wild throw to first, and romped over on Travis' bingle to center. Further scoring was cut off when Travis was thrown out at third trying to pick up two bases on Bloodworth's single, DiMaggio to Tabor.

Despite their 11 safeties, the Nats weren't exactly a slugging crew yesterday. They had 10 singles, and their only extra-base hit furthered the cause not at all. That came in the fourth off the bat of Jimmy Pofahl, a triple to start the inning. Third Baseman Tabor missed the throw from the outfield, but chased it down in time to throw to Foxx and catch Jimmy at home.

Only twice before the final frame was Boston in a position to score and both times Hudson clamped down to retire at least two men. Bobby Derr started the third with the second hit off Sid, a double, but he stayed on second, while Grove struck out, DiMaggio grounded out, short to first, and Cramer flied out to Case. In the fourth, with one out, Foxx slugged another double into rightfield, but Finney popped to left and Spence lined to Lewis.

Lewis' handling of the above out was probably the fielding gem of the day. On a dead run, the lanky Carolinian snagged the ball on his shoe tops.

One lonely base on balls marked the game. Grove handed that one to Travis in the sixth inning, but Cece was out trying to steal. Three strikeouts were credited to Grove, while Hudson had six at the end of hostilities.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Sid Hudson was far and away the hero of the Nats 2-1 victory over Boston yesterday, so he gets the major portion of points and the lead in the Man of the Month contest for July.

To Hudson, 15 points, because he set the Red Sox down with five hits and one run, the latter unearned, and struck out six batsmen. He also contributed the single which scored Washington's first run in the second inning.

To Cecil Travis, 8 points, because he batted in the winning run in the eighth, played flawless ball at third.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, 5 points, because he contributed three base-hits to the Nats' cause.

To Buddy Myer, 3 points, because his throw home in the ninth cut down the tying run. He also scored the opening run after singling.

To George Case, 3 points, because he singled in the eighth and came home with the winning run. He handled four long flies without difficulty.

To Buddy Lewis, 2 points, because his one-handed catch of Spence's fly in the fourth halted a Bosox rally. His throw to Myer helped cut off the tying run in the last inning.

Dodgers Take Nightcap From Bees, Lose 1st

Brooklyn Wins, 3-0; Posedel Captures Opener for Boston, 3-2

By International News Service

Boston, Aug. 11.—The Brooklyn Dodgers today celebrated "Durocher's day" by whitewashing the Boston Bees, 3 to 0, after dropping a 3 to 2 decision in their twin bill opener.

A seven-hit pitching performance by Vito Tamulis in the nightcap enabled the Dodgers to secure an even split in their four game series. The Dodgers tallied all their runs in the seventh inning on a walk, an error by Buddy Hassett, a sacrifice and singles by Joe Vosmik and pinchhitter Jim Wasdell.

In the opener, Sailor Bill Posedel hung up his eighth win of the campaign as he and Dick Coffman scattered eighth Brooklyn hit.

Coffman came to the rescue in the eighth frame after Posedel lost control and passed three men in a row.

Bama Rowell produced the game winning run in the eighth when he spanked out a single to score Posedel. Tex Carleton, the ancient nemisis of the Bees, was hit freely.

A crowd of 25,000 cash customers, including 600 Brooklyn rooters, jammed the beehive and saw Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers receive a gold watch from Hartford, Conn., admirers.

Greenbelt Wins Softball Crown

Carr and Boswell Ten Beaten in Play-off, 3-1

The Prince Georges County Softball League championship went to Greenbelt yesterday when it turned back Carr and Boswell, 3-1, at Magruder Park, Hyattsville.

The winners took a 1-run lead in the fourth, added two runs to it in the fifth, and coasted to victory. C. and B.'s only tally was shoved across in the final frame.

Trumbule was credited with the decision, though his five-hit effort was no better than that of McLaren, of the losers. Three errors behind the latter, however, accounted for his defeat.

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 11.—Coach Ray Flaherty today announced that he had sent out the clarion call for one of his backfield stars of 1938 who quit the club for a college coaching job—Bill Hartman, the pile-driving tailback from the University of Georgia.

Informed that Hartman is suffering an attack of homesickness for his old spot at right halfback in the Redskin backfield, Flaherty let out a whoop and immediately went into action about getting in touch with the 200-pound Georgian.

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 11.—Kirby Higbe and Hal Schumacher turned in two brilliant pitching performances today as the Phils and the New York Giants split a doubleheader.

Higbe ended a nine-game losing streak for the Phils by shutting out the Giants on five hits to take the opener, 2 to 0. In the afterpiece Schumacher held the Phils to three hits to win, 8 to 2. He had a shutout until the ninth when Joe Marty doubled two runs home.

Marty, who got five of the Phils' nine hits in both games, drove in the winning run in the opener by tripling Merrill May home in the first inning.

Babe Young homered off Hugh Mulcahy with the bases full in the ofirst inning of the second game to give the Giants a commanding edge. He hit another roundtripper in the seventh off Relief Pitcher Walter Beck to drive in five of the Giants' eight runs.

The Yake Family Dominates Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair

By the Associated Press

Crisfield, Md., Aug. 11.—The Edward Yake family from Essex, displaying a catch that made them the envy of competing anglers, walked off with most of the prizes today in the fifth annual grand contest of the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association.

More than 3,000 persons gathered in the downtown section around the judges' stand, cheered the family time and again as Edward Yake, Helen Yake and Catherine Yake were announced as winners in the various contests.

More than 100 trophies were awarded following a day and a half of fishing. The contest started at daybreak yesterday, with anglers from 17 nearby States entered.

State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes, president of the Fishing Fair Association, presented the awards. Stewart Kennard, of Baltimore, another association official, awarded Mrs. Tawes a necklace—made from fish scales—in recognition of her work in assisting in arrangements for the fair.

Gov. O'Conor, Senator George Radcliffe and Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore sent messages expressing regrets that they were unable to attend.

A. Ritzenberg, Burkom Win Doubles Title

Hy Ritzenberg, Haney Lose in Delayed Public Parks Final

The combine of Allie Ritzenberg and Phil Burkom, Maryland University's gift to local tennis, dropped the first set of its Public Parks doubles final yesterday, but came back in the next three to take the title over Allie's brother, Hy, and Stan Haney.

Scores were 4—6, 6—3, 6—1 and 6—3, with Hy and Haney furnishing little competition in the concluding sets.

The match at the Sixteenth Street Reservoir courts had been postponed several weeks ago during the regular tournament when rain interrupted proceedings. It was Allie's second straight triumph in the doubles, but the first time with Burkom as his partner.

Headlining the Thursday show will be Ernie Dusek, the durable Nebraskan, and Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, both famous villains.

Fans liked the two-man competition so much that Turner feels he will stage them every week.

Lippincotts Run One, Two In Bay Regatta

Robert Sails Sea Robin To Victory, With Brother Howard Second

By the Associated Press

Oxford, Md., Aug. 11.—The Lippincott brothers from Riverton, N. J., ran the rest of the Comets right off the Tred Avon River today in finals of the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club's annual regatta.

Robert Lippincott sailed his Sea Robin to first place for the coveted Gretina Bowl, and right behind him was Howard Lippincott, sailing Sirius. And still another Riverton entry—E. K. Merrill's Shu Fly—took third place.

The Aries II, W. H. Wilmer's consistent performer in the Star class, amassed 58 points to win the Lipton trophy. Wilmer is a member of the Corinthian Yacht Club. W. H. Crouse's Duchess and Peter Kaiser's Flying Cloud tied on points, with 55 each, but the judges ruled the Duchess had finished ahead of Flying Cloud twice before, and deserved second place.

Flying Cloud made up for that, however, by winning the Johnson Memorial Trophy for Kaiser in another Star boat event. Duchess was second and Aries II third.

Rebel, owned by the Owen Boat Co., Dundalk, won the Dr. Stevens Memorial in the cruising division. Indian Scout, owned by J. M. Sherwood, of Gibson Island, was second.

The Belle M. Crane broke a mast this morning and the log canoes' race for the Commodore's cup was called off.

Heavy clouds, a light sprinkle of rain and warning signals of a hurricane in the south caused many spectators to depart in the hurry as the last event was completed. The Coast Guard cutter Calypso made a hurried departure for Baltimore.

Charles Town Track Starts Work on Steeplechase Course

'Shed Row,' 'Rock Pile' Eliminated

Plans for Infield Call for 6 Fences; Flat-Racing Track To Be Resurfaced

By Walter Haight

While Charles Town fans love that track as much in December as they do in May, two landmarks at the popular West Virginia oval will be missing when the horses return this year for the late fall meeting. Conspicuous by their absence will be (1) the rock pile at the clubhouse end of the infield and (2) the "shed row" of stalls along the backstretch.

To Russell Oakes, of Charles Town's official family, I'm indebted for this informative word picture of the situation up in Jefferson County.

The long-postponed work of grading and beautifying the infield of the three-quarter-mile racing plant has been inaugurated.

A giant motor shovel, scooping up three-quarters of a cubic yard of soil each time its relentless jaws attack, is chugging away each day from early morning until late evening. By the time its work is completed, it will have moved from 7,000 to 8,000 cubic yards of earth.

The program of work calls not only for cutting down the ugly hump on the clubhouse end of the infield, but for general resurfacing of the racing strip, and for the construction of a 60-foot-wide steeplechase course. While it is the desire of A. J. Boyle, president and general manager, to have the new jumping course ready for racing at the spring-summer meeting of 1941, there is no certainty that it can be put into usable shape in so short a time.

Steeplechase Course

The jumping course will be of a rolling nature. On the backstretch and on the far turn, it will be approximately 6 feet below the main track. From the eighth polo, it will rise gradually to within a few inches of the level of the main racing strip and then, going into the clubhouse turn, will drop gradually again. There will be six jumps on the course, one of them of the water variety.

From the inside edge of the steeplechase course, the land will be terraced very gently into the center portion of the infield so as to provide maximum safety for loose or unmanageable horses. The whole of the infield is to be landscaped and, when completed, doubtless will compare favorably with any race track infield in the country.

The row of ramshackle stables on the "backside," has been torn down. The famous "Shed Row," a hangover from the days when the only racing here was conducted by the local Horse Show Association, will be replaced by a fence of the Martha Washington type. Eventually, as the need arises, new barns will be constructed on another portion of the association's property.

The work program now in progress calls for the construction of new roads within the plant, and for extensive landscaping. Whether all of this can be achieved before the Charles Town Jockey Club, Inc., opens its 15-day fall meeting on December 2, is doubted. But Boyle has determined to push his improvement plans to consummation, no matter how much time is required. It is his aim to make the plant in its entirety comparable in beauty to the surrounding countryside, and to the indescribably lovely vista from the grandstand and clubhouse.

While horsemen who campaigned their thoroughbred charges at the recent spring-summer meeting expressed satisfaction with track conditions, Boyle is not yet satisfied with the racing strip and has ordered general resurfacing with a sandy loam in the hope that is will be vastly improved. Much of the resurfacing already has been accomplished.

Boyle and Mrs. Boyle now are on vacation, and in their absence the improvement work and construction are under the directions of Leeds K. Reily, secretary of the Charles Town Jockey Club, Inc., and Henry Erickson, track superintendent.

Jumping Popular

It is expected that the inauguration of steeplechasing at Charles Town will prove vastly popular with the track's many loyal patrons. For several years there has been a demand upon the racing association for inclusion in its program of jumping events. In nearby Virginia are many training and breeding farms for hunters, and the famous Virginia hunting country is virtually at Charles Town's back door. The Virginia hunt set patronizes the Charles Town races liberally, and it is believed that it will attend in even greater numbers once its favorite type of racing is offered.

Many of the jumping-horse people of Virginia and Maryland have assured officials of the Charles Town Jockey Club, Inc., that they will send here leppers of a grade comparable to that raced over the jumping courses of Maryland's major tracts. With the class of flat racers improving steadily at the Charles Town meetings, the prospect is that at future sessions patrons will find a grade of racing considerably higher than the average at courses of less than a mile in circumference.

Greyhound Races Today At Goshen

Appearance of Trot Champ Overshadows Hambletonian Week

By the Associated Press

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Greyhound, the handsome almost-white trotting gelding owned by E. J. Baker, of St. Charles, Ill., makes another of his "farewell" appearances here tomorrow and that is almost enough to take the edge off the Hambletonian Stakes as the main attraction of Goshen's big week.

Of course, there's nothing else in the harness-racing world quite like the Hambletonian. That's why this one race for three-year-old trotters annually turns Goshen from a sleepy little village into a teeming metropolis for one day. But, neither, is there anything like Greyhound.

Holder of the world mile record, Greyhound had been limited to exhibitions for two seasons because there wasn't any competition for him. But the establishment of the trotting horse club stakes this year enabled him to race again. So far he has proved his greatness by winning all four stakes he has entered without the loss of a heat and he's expected to win again tomorrow in the First Division Stake, a $2,500 event.

Mary, another Baker entry, Bag Piper, Athlone Flaxey Guy and Bravo.

The Hambletonian, as usual, will be the week's biggest event for three good reasons. It probably will have the highest value of any "buggy whip derby" since the Marchioness won in 1932. If there are ten starters, it will gross approximately $44,000, as compared to last year's $40,502. It looks like an interesting, wide-open race with at least eight starters and likely more. And with the advent of mutuel betting, the crowd is expected to be bigger than ever—upward of 45,000.

Rated as almost certain starters are Spencer Scott, owned by C. W. Phellis, of Greenwich, Conn.; Dunbar Bostwick's Kuno, of New York; Milestone, owned by Joseph A. Neville, of Delaware, Ohio; Harry Short's Remus, of Columbus, Ohio, and Earl's Moody Guy, from Earl F. Shropshire's Lexington, Ky., stable. Queen Victoria, Steward and Princess Pert also probably will start, and Gentleman Jim, handled by H. M. (Doc) Parshall, who drove Peter Astra, last year's winner; Sister Hanover and Millie's Mite are possibilities.

George Abrams Slight Choice Over Cocoa Kid

10-Rounder Listed Tonight at Stadium; 7,000 Fans Expected

victories over Jimmy Jones, Lou Brouillard, Harry Balsamo, and twice has beaten Billy Soose, recent conqueror of Overlin.

If Abrams fails to make 160 pounds or under today at the weighin, Manager Chris Dundee is due to lose a $500 forfeit check to Leon Brody and George Sheppard, comanagers of the colored fighter.

On Saturday Abrams' handler reported he was down to 164 pounds and would have no trouble in coming in on the prescribed weight. The local boy has been training at Madame Beys' New Jersey resort the past week.

In supporting bouts tonight, Harry Hurst, Canadian featherweight, will meet Charley Gilley in a six-rounder. The Canadian is managed by Al Foreman, who introduced him to local fight fans on the Furr-Cocoa card, when the Canadian was a knockout victor over Irish Bob Riley. Hurst also worked out yesterday at the arena.

Other six rounders will pit Billy Banks against Johnny Buff, of New York; Tiger Flowers meets Babe Scott, and Ray Landis engages Bob Riley.

Steelers Receive Two Giant Rookies

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—The New York football Giants announced today that J ck Saunders, rookie from Southern Methodist, and Joe Yurcic, from New Mexico State, have been sent to the Pittsburgh Steelers to complete the trade for Halfback Kay Eakin. Both are tackles. Yurcic played last season with Jersey City, of the American Association.

The Giants originally traded Ox Parry for the right to negotiate with Eakin, but Parry decided to retire from pro football. Coach Steve Owen still has eight tackles, four veterans, among the 42 players who are due to report at the club's Orangeburg, N. Y., training camp next Thursday.

Bill Bennings —At the Post

Selections at Saratoga.

Dear Al:

No racing at Cumberland today. The first million-dollar meeting in that section will be resumed tomorrow. Tod. y Lucky Teeter and his boys, who play leap-frog with cars and motorcycles will hold sway at the Queen City's fair grounds, affectionately referred to as "Fairgo." I hope Teeter is more lucky there than were the Benningites last week. For today, I am taking my weekly flyer at New York. But getting back to Cumberland, I heard what I thought was the best wisecrack of the month last week. Tom Lewis, a giant of a fellow who trains for Galt Davis and others, was discussing a poor ride on a certain horse. "You trainers should complain to the stewards," spoke up a bystander. "I don't want to get any boy in trouble," said Lewis. "Personally, I have been getting good rides. Why should we deprive a boy of his chance to make a living? Why take that jock to whom we were referring. If he ever got ruled off all he could do for a living would be to call for Phillip Morris." Two signs around the stables gave me a laugh. Instead of the usual "Bad Dog," one reads "Bad Horse." Another reads, "Saddle horses, $1 an hour." Speaking of hiring out race horses for saddle riding, a groom did that once at Timonium some years back on the morning that the horse was in the entries. The groom was far in the bottle when the owner came back to the barn and saw a stranger riding up on the thoroughbred. The owner demanded an explanation and the young man in the saddle simply asked, "Is my hour up yet?" Vernon Wisner, Baltimore jockey who outgrew flat racing, is now trying his hand at steeplechasers and rode the horse, Tennis, last Saturday. The records show Wisner rode Tennis in 1935 on the flat at Marlboro. IDRA Kirk wants to congratulate Cumberland on its good programs and its drinking fountains. He wrote the note just after cashing Saturday's daily double. Marlboro opens a week from today. How time and bank rolls fly! When Marlboro gets under way, remember don't go around looking for that second road into the track. General Manager Joe Farrell hopes to build it before 1941 but we will have to string along with the old entrance over the bridge. This route, however, has been improved. Sis on Marlboro with no clubhouse. The jockeys held a dance Saturday night to help Danny Scocca, who broke his arm in a spill last week. See you on the rail—tomorrow. BILL.

First Race—Michigan Flyer appears to have the stretch drive to dispose of rivals such as these. The dope says "yes" on this one. Capt. James won his last and is fit as hands make horses. Drift Along for the minor award.

Second Race—Sanwick, winner of two in a row, must be respected until defeated. Has the speed to cope with these and I'm going to string along. Chance Cut has been rested and deserves attention at the light weight. Flagsest is a speedy maiden.

Third Race—De Icer is dropping down a peg and has that last good effort as a recommendation. Promises to get right ride from Johnny Longden. Port Wales' last was good and he is in excellent hands. Last Frontier was too highly placed in that recent test.

Fourth Race—Admiralette, full sister of War Admiral, promises to do a lot of running in this field of maiden fillies. That last outing can be charged off to education. Isolde is reported to be a fair sort. Royal Robes has speed and is dangerous.

Fifth Race—The chart reveals that Rust had excuses in that recent defeat. With clear sailing this one should take a purse here. Broad Vision and Chance Sweet are in good condition and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Sixth Race—Pistol Pete has done about everything asked. Has the speed to get to the top and I believe he will stay there. Trystate was a recent winner and is dangerous. Be Prepared to take care of the minor award.

Seventh Race—Shambles won for me last week when I was potshooting at this track. I see no reason for mistakes today. Tanganyika for the place award. Candy Hero may take part of the money.

Best Bet—Pistol Pete.

Horses to Watch At Cumberland

Happy Miracle—Should have won recent test but had poor racing luck. Ready for the best.

Gold Sweep—Has stretch punch and should win this week over a distance of ground.

Sea Finn—Toss out last Saturday's effort. This one is rounding into top condition.

Doctors Nurse—Underestimated filly who can run and win with the best around the grounds.

Gold D'Or—Trying to kid the public. Ready for winning effort and needs only right handling.

Lady Buck—Five furlongs would suit this speedy miss. She may get that route this week.

Quest D'Or—This juvenile will be dropped in right spot soon. Better than generally rated.

Kittiwake—Closing ability should earn this one a purse in the near future.

W. Jeffords, Algernon Craven To Act as Judges in Bench Show

Virginia Foxhound Club to Be Held At Montpelier on September 18

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottiesville, Va., Aug. 11.—Walter M. Jeffords, M. F. H. of the Glen Riddle (Pa.) Hunt Club, and Algernon S. Craven, former M. F. H. of the Albemarle County Hunt, have accepted invitations to act as judges at the seventh annual bench show of the Virginia Foxhound Club, to be held at Montpelier, estate of Mrs. Marion du Pont Scott, near Montpelier Station, Orange County, September 18.

Twenty-one classes are listed for the day—seven for dog hounds, seven for bitch hounds, and seven special classes. Final event of the afternoon will be a horn blowing contest, in which post entries will be allowed.

In Class 6, for dog hounds, the Orange County Hunt Club offers a challenge cup, to be won three times by the same exhibitor for the best stallion hound certified to be the sire of living puppies. Jubilee, of the Orange County Hunt, has two legs on the cup, having won the event in 1938 and again last year.

In Class 7 the Virginia Fox Hound Club will give a silver medal and championship ribbon for the champion dog hound. Post entries will be permitted.

Challenge Cup Offered

In Class 13, for bitch hounds, the Middleburg Hunt offers a challenge cup for the best brood bitch. Winner of this event in 1938 was Vena Parrish, of the Fairfield and Westchester Hounds, while last year Jaunty, of the Orange County Hunt, walked off with first prize.

The Foxcatcher Hounds offer a challenge plate for the best hound which has been placed in any recognized field trial. Bill Black, of the Farmington Hunt pack, copped first honors in 1938, while last year the judges pinned the blue ribbon on Bashful, owned by John C. Stewart, of Keswick.

The Warrenton Hunt will donate a challenge plate for the best unentered hound. Big Trouble, from the Middleburg Hunt, was the victor in 1938, and last year the event was annexed by Jocular, of the Orange County Hunt.

The Virginia Foxhunters' Association has offered a challenge cup for the grand champion foxhound of the show. Jubilee, of the Orange Hunt, won two years ago, and Jocular, from the same kenneis, was first last year.

Other Prizes Also Offered

Other prizes offered in the special events include a challenge cup offered by the American Foxhound Club, gift of William du Pont, jr., for the best hound in the show; and a challenge plate, donated by the Masters of Foxhounds Association, for the best five couples of hounds (dogs, bitches or mixed) to be shown as a pack. A leg on this trophy was won last year by the Essex foxhounds.

ON FISHING

Rare Fish Dragged In by 3 Anglers At East Hampton

Regardless of the fact that Kip Farrington is fishing editor of Field and Stream and the author of many books and stories on fishes and fishing, he always finds time to get to his friends and fishing scribes any outstanding happenings or piscatorial oddities. How he does it, considering his own fishing activities, is more than we can understand.

ACKERMAN

Yet it is through him that we learn that three East Hampton, Long Island anglers while surf-casting last week on the beach west of the Maidstone Club, saw a large fish struggling in the break. They waded out and managed to drag it ashore through the scant three feet of water.

It was 6 feet long and had a tail-spread of 23 inches. The beautiful pinkish silver of its sides was dimmed but little by the bright scarlet fins, although one of the pectorals were missing and the great blunt head wounded and bleeding—evidently having been hit by the propellor of a boat, for the plump body wasn't that of a sick

Civil Service Ruling Issued On Hatch Law

Commission Holds Act Restricts Only Partisan Politics

The Civil Service Commission ruled yesterday that the Hatch Act does not prevent employes of State and local governments from discussing "issues of broad social, economic or general public character," but confined its restrictions to discussions of "partisan political issues."

In a statement, the commission expressed the belief "that the primary objective of the legislation is to prevent partisan political activity in connection with the conduct and management of political campaigns." It added that "the commission's administration of the law will conform to this objective."

The original Hatch Act, enacted in 1939, extended to all Federal employes many of the restrictions against political activity previously applied only to those under civil service. An amendment signed by President Roosevelt on August 2 extended these restrictions to officers and employes of State or local governments "whose principal employment is in connection with any activity which is financed in whole or in part by loans or grants made by the United States or by any Federal agency."

The only penalty which the commission can impose is removal from office. Criminal prosecutions under the act will be handled by the Justice Department.

Reichsbank Head Says He Agrees With Lindbergh

Koenigsberg, Germany, Aug. 11 (AP).—Walther Funk, Reichsbank president and economic minister, roundly scored free trade nations, including the United States, today and declared that barter is the only salvation for world commerce. He agreed with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh that:

"When the rich get too rich and the poor too poor, something happens."

Funk asserted that only German victory would make possible "peaceful economic competition in the interest of all nations participating in world trade."

Funk attacked the American-suggested "cartel" to dispose of the Western World's surpluses and charged free-trade nations with resorting to the embargo and boycott to dominate world trade.

Referring to Lindbergh's remark in a speech at Chicago August 4, the economic minister recalled his own address in Rome 18 months ago, when he said "the old rich (nations) will become poor and the young poor will become rich."

Sumners Bill May Reach House Floor This Week

Sumners bill proponents predicted yesterday their resolution would go to the House floor this week.

Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, is expected to attend to the matter in the House Rules Committee when it meets at 10 a. m. today, and Representative U. S. Guyer (Republican), of Kansas, said "we will ask that the resolution be considered by the House as soon as possible."

The resolution provides for a constitutional amendment giving Congress the power to allow District representation in Congress, the right to vote for Presidential electors and to allow such home rule as it may see fit.

Hagerstown Sees Big Peach Crop

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 11 (AP).—Although the entire crop is from a week to ten days later than usual, a bumper peach output is expected in Washington County this season.

Orchardists emphasize, however, that rain is needed to fill out the fruit properly and a continued lack of moisture could affect adversely the season's production.

Early varieties already are being packed, including the Golden Jubilee and the Hiley and Georgia Belle varieties will ripen next.

The heaviest production will be late this month when the Elbertas and the Shippers' Late Red will be picked. Majority of the fruit growers favor the Elbertas and when they ripen hundreds of pickers will be employed.

Curretn indications are that prices will be about average. Many Washington County peaches are shipped each year to the Middle West, with some going to Boston and the Northeast.

Norman Thomas Denounces Draft

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 11 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist Party nominee for President, told 300 Iowa Socialists here today that "it only remains to have peacetime military conscription in the United States to complete the framework of a totalitarian state."

Speaking at the Iowa State convention, Thomas, candidate for the fourth time on the Socialist ticket, declared, "last winter—and until March and April, I thought civil liberties in this country were better protected than ever before. But that is not so today. Most people don't realize how serious it has become."

Asiatic Fleet Is Reported Manila-Bound

Summer Schedule Canceled; Imporatnt Developments Seen

By International News Service

Shanghai, August 11.—Unofficial but authoritative reports that the American Asiatic squadron had quietly canceled its plans to summer in North China ports and had left for Manila led tonight to the belief that important developments were impending.

It was pointed out that the usual procedure of the squadron was to pass the hot months in northern Tsintao and Chefoo. Instead, right in the middle of the torrid months, they were reported heading for tropical Manila.

[Navy Department officials in Washington refuse to confirm or deny the reports. Department spokesmen pointed out that all movements of vessels of the United States Navy during the world crisis have been regarded as secret.]

Shanghai circles, however, saw in the reported change of plans a possible counter-move against dispatch of a large part of the Japanese fleet, accompanied by several troop transports, to the South China Sea.

Departure of the strong Japanese force was reported last week. It was understood in Shanghai circles that it was intended for use in French Indo-China, to plug a leak through which war supplies are said to be reaching the Chinese armies of Generalissimo Chiang-Kai-shek, for use against the Japnese.

Alexandria Hospital May Give Premarital Tests

In a further attempt to shorten the length of time applicants must wait for marriage licenses in Virginia under the new State pre-marital health test law, President Clarence J. Robinson, of the Alexandria Hospital will confer with State Health Department officials this week on a proposal to establish a laboratory in Alexandria for performing the required serological examinations.

President Robinson has already asked Dr. I. J. Riggin, State health commissioner, if Alexandria Hospital might qualify for State approval prior to the next scheduled serological survey in November.

Dr. W. Lewis Schafer, city health officer, of Alexandria, pointed out that if tests were administered in Alexandria applicants for licenses would have only a three-hour wait before the reports were available. As it is now, applicants are forced to wait from five to seven days, until the blood test reports are returned from the State Health Department in Richmond. Analysis of blood samples is made on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

The schools will be managed by local leagues and led by league members, but the courses are planned for the general public.

Hoyt Gets N. A. A. Publicity Post

Kendall K. Hoyt, publicity director of the Taft-for-President campaign, has been appointed publicity director of the National Aeronautic Association, it was announced by Col. G. deFreest Larner, the association general manager.

Hoyt has engaged in Washington news work and publicity for national groups for the past 12 years. He has been associated with American Aviation and other magazines and is a charter member of the Aviation Writers Association.

The NAA, Col. Larner said, is organizing a Nation-wide program to enlist public support in development of American air supremacy both in the military and civilian fields.

District Lacks Law on Theft Of Explosives

District regulations for the transportation and use of dynamite are comprehensive and strict, but special regulations to protect the public from random thefts and careless disposal of the explosive do not exist. Such thievery comes under the ordinary laws against larceny only.

These facts were revealed at police headquarters yesterday, as a result of inquiry following the discovery of three sticks of dynamite in an abandoned trunk on Friday, in a lot near the Walsh Mansion on Massachusetts avenue. Only the curiosity of a small boy prevented the dynamite from being sent to the District incinerator with the trunk. No one was able to tell how it got there, or where it came from.

In fact, restrictions on high explosives do not begin, under police regulations, until the quantity exceeds 5 pounds. When that point is reached it becomes necessary to have a permit from the fire marshal to transport it. If the quantity reaches 300 pounds, it can be moved only by boat or steam railroad. It is against the law to use a truck.

If more than 50 pounds are carried in a truck, the transporter must ride alone, and his vehicle must be marked with letters at least 6 inches high, "Explosive." And there are other precautions.

None of them is designed, however, to make it impossible for a mischievous youngster to pick up a stick or two if he is so inclined, and to hide them on a vacant lot, or whereever else it may occur to him to leave them.

Passers-by Foil Attempted Attack

A 29-year-old Philadelphian was held for investigation by police yesterday after allegedly attempting to rape a 37-year-old woman who had just crossed the Franklin street bridge at Seventh street northeast.

The attack occurred Saturday about 8:30 p. m. as the woman, an employe of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was returning from work after leaving a bus near the east side of the bridge.

The woman said the man apparently had followed her from the bus. When she had crossed the bridge he seized her from behind, knocked her to the ground and struck her head against the sidewalk several times, she told police. Four men came to the woman's rescue, according to police, and the assailant ed into the nearby woods, where he was arrested by police a short time afterwards.

Police said the man in custody has a long criminal record.

Mess Cook Swims 11 Miles While Police Hunt Him

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—With Coast Guard cutters and police launches scouring New York Bay for him, a mess cook sought in a stabbing case swam 11 miles today before he was captured.

Donning a life preserver, Edward McGivney, 32, jumped in the bay after two seamen had been stabbed in an argument at the United States Maritime Training Station on Hoffman Island. McGivney headed for Staten Island.

Five hours later, and 5 miles from his starting point, he turned back when he saw police lined up on a Staten Island beach waiting for him.

He swam 6 more miles in the general direction of Coney Island. Then a police launch hauled him out.

Accused of knifing William J. Pasbt, 34, and William Harkins, 49, in an altercation following a drinking party, he was held without bail on a charge of felonious assault.

The affirmation was made public by Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers, of the Broadway Tabernacle Church, New York, and the Rev. A. J. Mutse, secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

War Tangles International Maritime Law

U. S. Is Only Major Nation Operating Under Conventional Standards

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 11.—The war, with its tangle of international boundaries and jurisdictions, has brought about a virtual breakdown of international maritime law.

"International law on the seas now," one shipping authority said today, "is the man with the biggest shotgun"—if a nation wants a ship, the simplest way is to take it.

The United States, a survey showed, is probably the only major Nation still able to operate under the conventional standards that have governed the water-borne commerce of the world, in peace and war, for centuries.

Casual reports have created a popular impression that the war simply divided international shipping into two categories, belligerent and neutral.

Confusion at Sea

Actually, shippers say, virtually every foreign ship has a different status, dependent on its immediate circumstances—principally the proximity of anybody who might want her.

Here are some typical points of confusion:

The Germans say the French Line has been dissolved and its ships absorbed; in New York, the French Line continues to operate "pending instructions" from its home office;

Since April the British and the Danes have been arguing over whether Denmark's several hundred remaining free ships are, because of German invasion of Norway and Denmark, subject to British seizure as enemies—a fundamental matter of international law;

The British, despite this contention, allowed many Danish vessels free passage to complete current voyages—because they had American cargoes.

Some 40 Dutch freighters are operating in the international trade theoretically subject to seizure either by the Germans (as conquest) or by the British, as in the case of the Danish ships; actually, the Germans have not seized them and the British have not acted because the resources and good will of the Dutch East Indies are too valuable to alienate.

Case of Danish Ship

There are other Dutch ships in the war zone theoretically subject to British seizure because of registry in a German-conquered country, but actually in danger of German seizure—because they are under British charter.

Even seizure may not be what it seems. Shippers here heard with perplexity of the case of a Danish ship in the Mediterranean seized by the British and disabled in the British-French imbroglio.

A few days later the owners in Denmark got a wireless plea from the captain, stranded in a North African port, for money for repairs, explaining that the British had "released" the ship and were no longer interested in her troubles. The owners replied, in effect, "see the British about the repairs—they're the ones who seized you."

And there the captain sat, and may still be sitting—one of the hapless victims of the new tangle in international law.

Mae West Denies Hoofer's Charges

Hollywood, Aug. 11 (AP).—Portly James Timony is Film Actress Mae West's "business manager and nothing else," she said in a statement today acidly commenting on a $105,000 damage suit filed against Timony by Frank Wallace, vaudeville dancer, who says he is Miss West's husband.

In his suit, Wallace charged that soon after Timony became business manager for Miss West "he assumed the relationship of a common-law husband of plaintiff's wife" and had prevented him (Wallace) communicating with the actress as well as threatening him.

Vulnerable Position

By Roger W. Babson

Miners Worried Over Outlook

If Germany wins the war, America's gigantic mining industry is in for a rough ride. The real prosperity of our mines has depended on foreign markets. We cannot begin to consume as much as our huge mines can produce. The last ten years have been tough enough, but with Germany out "to get" us in world markets, there is hard sledding ahead for United States copper, zinc, and lead producers, while the silver people are in an even tougher spot.

ROGER W. BABSON

This is the concensus among people with whom I have talked here in the mining country. It explains the unenthusiastic following for metal and mining securities in recent weeks. People are afraid that prices are going to even lower levels than at present despite our defense program. Stocks of the leading non-ferrous metals are very heavy. Production is still outstripping consumption and prices of metals have been among the weakest of commodities since the war boom blew up in Wall Street last September. Worries over the future price trend of the American metals are the basis for weakness in the price of metal stocks.

Silver is in an especially vulnerable position. We are still buying foreign silver at the world price and are purchasing millions of dollars worth of the domestic white metal at about twice the world price! The Treasury has tons and tons of the metal on hand—a big enough supply to cover our industrial uses for years ahead. The silver purchase program of the government is uneconomic and unsound. There is no more reason why the government should pay a fixed price, far above the world price, for silver than for any other United States commodity—wheat, apples, aluminum, or oil.

With the pressure on Congress to cut out all unnecessary expenses, this silver-purchase program will be under fire. Certainly, we ought to stop buying foreign silver, which has been helping to finance foreign governments without mutual benefit to us. The whole silver-buying idea has been one grand grab, one wild scheme which has cost the taxpayers $1,000,000,000 since early 1934! With a $14,000,000,000 defense program to finance, we cannot afford to continue to ladle out that kind of money to any group or to any minority—no matter how powerful their influence. When the Treasury stops paying 71 cents an ounce for silver, many a mine out in this country will have to fold up.

That is the darkest side of the picture. There's another side—and a brighter one. Copper, zinc, and lead are all vital raw materials for industries. In spite of the fact that new plastics are invading their field, there is a big demand for these metals when business is good in the United States. The demand is biggest when the heavy industries are booming. America is embarking on the biggest defense program in history. Few people yet realize the tremendous supplies of metals that will be used in this armament program. Hence, even if our export markets are cut off, our defense program will, for the next few years, take up much of the slack in the case of many metals.

Probably the most important long-term effect on the American metal business is "Ersatz." Plastic substitutes are increasing by leaps and bounds. Hundreds of articles which only five years ago were made from metal, today come from chemical substitutes. There is no question but that these new plastics—which pop out of the laboratory at a surprising rate—will eventually raise havoc with the metals business. Some of these plastics are cheaper to produce, easier to handle, shock-proof against abuse. I do not mean to imply that I believe that metals will be entirely—or even largely—replaced, but plastics will make inroads.

From an investment standpoint, metal securities have one big asset: They are an excellent inflation hedge. The present Congress will have appropriated $20,000,000,000 before it adjourns. The national debt may cross $50,000,000,000 in a year or two more. All lessons from past history teach us that this means inflation. If so, metal prices could soar and prices of metal securities could zoom. On the other hand, we have gone so far along the regimented road that the Government may establish top prices for raw materials, may turn us back toward deflation. Furthermore, the threat of a German-controlled Europe will continue to hang over the metal securities as long as the war continues.

Summing up, I find that mines and mine investors are not the most optimistic people with whom I have talked on this trip. On the other hand, they are not so discouraged over the outlook as some importers, shipping agents, office-equipment makers, and others who have been practically put out of business by the turn of world events! My observation is that they feel that there is a 50-50 chance for the metal markets to score substantial gains or to continue in the doldrums!

Girl, 7, Hurt As Father's Car Crashes

5 Arlington Residents Injured in 3-Auto Accident in Virginia

A 7-year-old Washington child was in undetermined condition after a traffic accident in Capitol Heights, Md., last night and five Arlington (Va.) residents were injured in a three-car crash near Paris, Va.

Lena Woodley, 7, of 2131 Fifth street northwest, was injured when a car driven by her father, Joseph Woodley, collided with an auto driven by Joshua M. McWilliams, of Landover, Md. The child was rushed to Casualty Hospital.

Those injured in the Paris crash were: Mrs. Fannie Harward, undetermined back injuries; Charles B. Bolick, scalp lacerations; Mrs. Ollie F. Bolick, cuts and bruises; William A. Sellers, scalp lacerations; Mrs. William A. Sellers, two fractured ribs. All are of 5619 Fourth street, Arlington.

State Trooper E. P. Landers said the car operated by Mrs. Bolick skidded as it struck a stretch of wet paving on Route 50 and sideswiped, in turn, cars driven by George E. Cook, of Winchester, and Russell Feeley, of Mount Williams, Va. The Cook car overturned. The Bolick car overturned also and plunged into a ditch.

Robert T. Rowe, of 1853 Mintwood place, northwest, suffered head lacerations yesterday when his car collided with a truck on a bridge over Difficult Run, two miles west of Fairfax, Va., on Route No. 1. He was treated at Georgetown Hospital. Gary Price, driver of the truck, was held by Fairfax police on a technical charge of reckless driving.

Four Skeletons Mystify Police In Alexandria

Alexandria police reported yesterday they were still unable to identify the remnants of four skeletons unearthed Saturday by a construction gang on a building project on Virginia boulevard, Beverly Hills. Further attempts to determine whether the area was at one time included in Arlington County cemetery records will be made, the department declared, and Arlington County officials have already been contacted.

The skeletons were dug up by a steam shovel and included portions of wooden coffins. The incident was investigated by Detective James Baber and Sergt. Lawrence Padgett, who believed that the plot of ground might have been used as a family burial site. Alexandria annexed the area from territory belonging to Arlington County several years ago, and local land records failed to provide any clew as to the section's former use.

Today's Radio Highlights

9:45 a. m., WMAL—No sooner did we print Evelyn Lynne's picture at the request of two ardent Breakfast Clubbers and list her for 8:45 each week-day morning than zowie, the very next day the morning revelry is pushed ahead an hour. Which is to say the Breakfast Club is now on at 9:45 a. m. Hope you have a nice breakfast.

10:30, WJSV—Chalk up the 1,001st performance of "Big Sister," that serial in which Alice Frost and Martin Gabel still have the leads and in which there are roles written in for the talents of Esther Ralson, Margalo Gillmore and Peggy Conklin, stage players who don't mind being up before noon to earn a few extra sheckles.

7, WJSV—Ray Heatherton, baritone of radio and stage, joins Elie Siegmeister, conductor of the Manhattan Chorus, on that musical quiz, So You Think You Know Music.

7, WRC—When James Melton was an undergraduate he woke the college dormitory one exam morning with a lusty version of Jules Massenet's "Le Reve" from "Manon." Since then he's toned it down to concert proportions which he illustrates on the Telephone Hour.

8, WJSV—Edward Everett Horton and Alan Mowbray play Bertie Wooster and butler Jeeves on the latter half of the hour Forecast. First portion is "The Life of the Party," with Hildegarde, David Ross and Shirley Wayne, of "Hellzapoppin'", doing bits that make them the l. o. t. p.

9:30, WRC—Minnesotans attention: You'll hear the gurgle in two bottles of water from two unnamed lakes in Minnesota on the Burns and Allen show. B. & A. will give their names to the lakes.

P. G. Wodehouse's immortal and imperturbable character, Jeeves, is to appear on the radio tonight, along with his pretty perturbable master, Bertie Wooster.

Alan Mowbray and Edward Everett Horton of the films, who should be able to do a pretty ideal job of it, translate the roles for the air and will be heard over WJSV at 8:30 p. m. in Columbia's impressive "Forecast" series which is seeking to uncover new ideas for autumn radio broadcasts.

Prior to this half-hour of zany-ty in the inimitable Wodehouse style, "Forecast," from New York, is to present another half hour of amusement called "Life of the Party." In it non-professional as well as professional entertainers are going to be just that. The dulcet-voiced Hildegarde, for instance, is going to do the song she's always asked to sing at parties. David Ross, the velvet-tongued gent who's won more diction awards than you can shake a syllable at, is going to tell his favorite party story. Shirley Wayne, of "Hellzapoppin," is going to show how easy it is to play a violin, wearing mittens. It seems she does that at parties and brings down the houses.

Then there'll be Cortez Peters who brings typewriters along to parties for a reason he'll illustrate on the air and a fellow, name of Tom King, who lugs along fire extinguishers, ditto. You're all invited!

TODAY in Washington

Contract Bridge

Two women were giving a bridge party at a nautical tavern called Skippers' Dock, where sea breezes gave relief from the summer heat and whipped up an appetite in the players for the lobster Newburg which was to conclude the party.

A city woman, who had just arrived at the resort, kept looking out on the water, inattentive to both the bidding and play. "When I see a sailboat"—she said, and a sigh explained the rest.

But the others, and some were fine players, too, were concentrating heavily, and nothing such as a flash of white mainsheet on glistening blue water could distract them from trying to win the shell-shaped pieces of jewlry which were the prizes.

At one table there was a great commotion and a rush of talk in women's high-pitched voices. A grand slam had been made but not bid; it proved to be laydown, and the women wanted to know what was wrong with the bidding. Here are the hands:

NORTH
♡ K J 6 2
◇ K 8 4
♣ A 5

SOUTH
♠ Q 9 6 4 3
♡ None
◇ A J 10 9 7 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

It appears that both North and South were timid, particularly South. On a similar hand Ely Culberson once made the bid of five spades for his partner, Teddy Lightner, to interpret. Any strong pair should reach a small slam, and seven depends upon finding out about the aces. Ossie Jacoby and his players would indicate controls by the direct method of bidding them, and they would undoubtedly reach the grand slam.

British Let Italy Waste Supplies In Africa, Bomb Desert Columns

Prepare to Defend Berbera, Not Every Inch of Hot Sands

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 11.—With Italian troops advancing in Somaliland through blistering heat, the British explained tonight that Britain's strategy is to encourage Premier Mussolini's men to use up their "precious supplies . . . in what is a strategically wasteful enterprise."

The Italians have not met the British defense force but the Fascist columns driving toward Berbera are being bombed systematically by the British.

The moving columns throw up huge clouds of dust, making good targets for the R. A. F. squadrons.

A British general headquarters statement said "it is not our object to defend every inch of soil in Somaliland but rather to make the enemy use up his precious supplies of food, petrol and ammunition, which he cannot replenish, in what is a strategically wasteful enterprise.

"The more the Italians dissipate their forces and their means, the more they lengthen their communications . . . the better it is for us."

The R. A. F. also kept a wary eye on the western desert for signs of an Italian thrust against Egypt—far more dangerous, if it should materialize, than other Italian thrusts at the Suez Canal.

Ready at Berbera

Troops from various parts of the empire are being assembled to reinforce the Somaliland camel corps and meet the Italians when and if they reach the environs of Berbera.

Berbera, chief port of British Somaliland directly across the gulf from the British stronghold of Aden, is a major objective in the Italians' declared aim of throttling British communications south of the Red Sea.

Despite Italian communiques claiming the captures of two passes, Karrin and Godajere, in the desolate Somaliland hills 70 miles south of Berbera, the British said the Italian forces of the Duke D'Aosta had not yet come in contact with the British "main position."

Laugh Off Italian Claims

The British, holding undisputed command of the Suez Canal, gateway from the Mediterranean on the north, and the Red Sea and Gulf of Aden on the south, laughed off Italian claims that success in British Somaliland "closes the back door to Suez, severs the route to India and bottles up the British Mediterranean fleet."

British naval officials described as an "absurdity" Italian claims that British forces had been cut off in North African waters, since they said the Italians have no warships in the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden.

Furthermore, they declared half of the submarines Italy was known to have sent there have been destroyed since June 11, in addition to one captured by a British trawler and taken to Aden.

740 Saved, 120 Lost As Torpedo Sinks British Transport

London, Aug. 11 (AP).—The 7,290-ton Egyptian liner Mohamed Ali El-Kebir, converted for use as a British transport, was torpedoed at night in the Atlantic and sank with 120 soldiers and sailors missing, the Admiralty said tonight.

The announcement said 740 survivors were taken aboard a ship that reached the liner in the two hours she remained afloat. They were landed at a Scottish port.

50,000 Refugees Expected in U. S.

Mrs. Stuart Rice, chairman of the Washington Committee for the Care European Children, reported yesterday that parents had registered 200,000 English children for evacuation. Seven thousand American homes have been volunteered for them to date.

However, she added, the committee is still appealing for homes and offers of support, as nearly 50,000 refugees are expected within the next few months.

The local committee is at 1101 M street northwest, and is cooperating with the Washington Council of Social Agencies.

Arthur H. Fleming, Lumberman, Dies

Pasadena, Calif., Aug 11 (AP).—Arthur H. Fleming, 84, wealthy lumberman and chief benefactor of the California Institute of Technology, died today.

After the World War he provided a fund for a memorial building in the Forest of Compeigne, France, to house the railroad car in which the 1918 armistice was signed. Since France's surrender, in the same car, it has been removed to Berlin.

Italian Press Assails Greece On 'Despotism'

Claims Albanian Minorities Oppressed; Fear in Balkans

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Aug. 11.—A strong attack against Greece for its "blind despotism" and "policy of intolerable persecutions" against Albanian subjects within its borders is contained in a dispatch today from the Tirana correspondent of Stefani, Italy's official news agency.

These words against Greece have caused considerable apprehension among Balkan circles in Rome, where they recall that similar language appeared in the German press at the beginning of the campaign against Czecho-Slovakia and Poland.

While it is too early to say whether the Italian government intends to take a strong stand against Greece, such a dispatch could not have been written without permission from the authorities, and therefore, it has definite political meaning.

Its publication is all the more surprising, since as late as last week the Italian press displayed prominently a speech by Greek Premier Gen. John Metaxas in which was stressed the strict policy of neutrality adopted by Greece and the good relations existing between Rome and Athens.

Even more striking in that accusation against the Greek government which is charged with fostering, "plundering" massacre, and deportations against Albanian nationalists, is the open territorial claim the dispatch makes in behalf of Albania.

French Stop Phone Calls, Crisis Expected

Laval Is Reported Likely to Be Ousted In Cabinet Shakeup

By Charles S. Foltz, jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

St. Gingolph (on the French-Swiss Border) (Monday), Aug. 12. The French government forbade telephone communication between Switzerland and central points in unoccupied France today following reports here that Vice Premier Pierre Laval was among those likely to be benched in an impending shakeup of the Petain government.

Only official calls from the Bern Legation and from French diplomats abroad were accepted by French telephone operators, working under army orders.

No official reason was given, but some French sources suggested that the order might mean a political crisis was brewing in France, while others expressed belief it was in connection with German preparations for an offensive against Britain.

Reports from influential sources in the unoccupied zone and Frenchmen outside the zone said Laval recently has been bombarded with criticism. These sources said the politician, who already has fulfilled his function of obtaining the old Parliament's approval of the new form of government, is one of those whose usefulness now is ended.

Attacks on Laval, who at first appeared to be the "strong man" of the Petain cabinet and whom the aged chief of state named as his political heir, were based on three counts:

1. Many leaders, both left and right, accused him of protecting certain leading figures of past cabinets, such as Georges Bonnet, former finance minister, from the Riom "war-blame" trial, and of attacking others, like former Premier Paul Reynaud, whose following still is strong.

2. The old Fascist Croix de Feu (which Laval as premier several years ago forced into dissolution) is increasing in strength with the addition of many of this war's veterans, and is a bitter enemy of Laval.

Germans Don't Like Him

3. The Germans are reported unwilling to support Laval, whom they consider just another pre-war French politician.

Petain and General Maxime Weygand both are reported determined to protect the army high command from any "disgrace" in the Riom trial. Informed quarters said Laval first began to slide from grace when he asked that former Generalissimo Gamelin be brought from retirement, to defend himself at the trial.

Former Premier Daladier, with other accused former cabinet members and deputies, is reported to have obtained the promise of many leading deputies and senators—including Edouard Herriot, who defended them before the Assembly which recently ratified the new constitution—that they might testify in their defense at Riom.

Daladier and his companions allege they were "framed"; that Laval and other Rightists asked them to go to North Africa to prepare a new seat of government there, just to get them out of the way until an armistice could be arranged.

Unions on Way Out

Vichy, France, Aug. 11 (AP).—Organized labor appeared headed for the scrap heap in France today. Preparations were shaping up rapidly for a corporative style structure in which workers and employes are organized in units and their differences settled by the government.

Although France's great labor organization, C. G. T. (Confederation General de Travail) has abandoned its old "class struggle" principles and proclaimed its aims of protecting "interests of the nation," a violent campaign has broken out against it.

The press is unanimously demanding a complete new organization of the nation's industrial life in corporative and professional groups.

Leon Jouhaux, who as secretary-general of C. G. T. was France's labor chief, and other leaders have been attacked simultaneously in newspapers for alleged pro-Soviet leanings prior to the war.

One of the first moves in the corporative program was taken by the National Confederation of Hotel, Restaurant and Cafe Proprietors who called a meeting in Paris shortly to discuss organization of corporative units. A similar meeting was held at Lyon for unoccupied areas.

War Sidelights

Lithuanians in Berlin Slam Legation Door on Russians

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 11.—Two Russian Embassy secretaries tried again today—by personal appearance and telephone—to get possession of the Lithuanian legation, but the gate was slammed in their faces and the phone didn't answer.

First they drove up to the gate and rang the bell.

"Whom do you wish to see?" asked the caretaker.

"None of your business—we're masters of these premises," was the icy retort.

The caretaker disappeared, leaving the callers at the gate.

"Lock the iron gates for the rest of the day," the minister, Kazys Skirpa, ordered. The caretaker did, leaving the Russians out on the street.

That was at 9 a. m. At 5 p. m. they still were trying to get the legation to surrender by telephone.

Vichy Aug. 11 (AP).—The Petain government today declared 300 trains are operating weekly between occupied and unoccupied zones with 300,000 refugees returning home in occupied areas each week.

Nearly 20 shipyards were reported back at work rebuilding French merchant shipping. Accounts of war damage in Vichy newspapers said Dunkerque and neighboring Malo Les Baines were virtually destroyed. The lower part of Verdun, the northern section of Tours and certain parts of Orleans, Saumur and Blois were destroyed.

These reports said that in some parts of northern France, where the fighting was heaviest nothing but rubbish was left of once thriving towns. In some only a few smoke-blackened walls were left standing.

Bucharest, Rumania, Aug. 11 (AP) (Passed by Censor).—Diplomatic circles reported tonight Germany has asked Rumania to delay application of anti-Jewish laws for the present.

Nazi intervention was reported to be based on the belief that Jews occupy so vital a position in the country's economic life that their sudden exclusion would impair production and slow the flow of needed supplies to Germany.

A Southeast English Port, Aug. 11 (AP).—A truck delivering a new balloon for barrage at this German-attacked port this afternoon had chalked on its sides:

"You knock 'em down; we'll put 'em up again."

Dublin, Aug. 11 (AP).—One hundred and eighty thousand men have joined Eire's defense force since June 1, Frank Aiken, minister of defense coordination, announced today. Aiken said that "any enemy who attempts to attack Irish territory will pay dearly for it."

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Mayor Maury Maverick, of San Antonio, Tex., offered today to take as a war refugee "the mayor's kid" of either Liverpool or Southampton, England.

He made the suggestion to the Women's Mercy Ships Committee, but added that "any one (child) will do."

Yacht Blast Story Believed Hoax

Detroit, Aug. 11 (AP).—An apparent hoax kept the Coast Guard busy today chasing rumors of a yacht explosion on Lake Erie and the sum total of its efforts made the story look, as one Guardsman put it, "like a 'phoney.'"

An unidentified person, or persons, spread a report that a cruiser yacht named Lovely Lady had exploded a few miles off Put-in-Bay (Ohio) port, killing possibly 12 persons, but the Coast Guard here and in Ohio never could confirm the tale.

90 Planes Bomb Chinese Capital

Chungking, China (Monday), Aug. 12 (AP).—Ninety Japanese bombing planes dumped tons of explosives on this provisional Chinese capital today in their twenty-fifth raid since May. Less than 50 persons were reported killed or wounded.

The Soviet Embassy was hit for the third time in three months.
